Oil Drilling Planned Off Point Reyes

More than 300,000 acres of submerged land off the California Coast, including 118,300 acres off the Point Reyes National Seashore, were leased for oil drilling yesterday by the federal government.

The land is three-miles and more from shore. The parcels are scattered from Morro Bay north to Crescent City along about two-thirds of the California Coast.

Biggest purchaser of the five-year leases was Shell Oil Co., which paid $11,440,220 for 49 of the 57 tracts offered for bid May 14. Shell has all the parcels off the national seashore.

James E. Cole, project manager for the Point Reyes National Seashore, said the drilling towers on the leased lands will be seen from the Point Reyes coast. But he did not believe they presented any threat to the park.

"What we must watch is what the state does," he said.

He explained that California has control over leasing the offshore lands within the three-mile limit. The state has leased some of this land already in Southern California.

HANDLES LEASE

It was the Department of Interior that handled leasing of the federal lands, the same department that governs national seashores and parks.

Closest tract is a 700-acre parcel three miles off the lighthouse point at Point Reyes. Oil company explorations had apparently shown this to be a desirable piece. It was leased at $454.80 an acre, the top price. There are a total of 22 parcels off the park coast, some as far off as 12 miles.

No pipes or tanks or other facilities connected with oil production will be allowed on park property, Cole said.

"We were able to get that provision in the agreements," Cole said.

CLEAR WAY

The leases will clear the way for the first offshore oil drilling in Northern California, and they will involve the farthest from shore drilling on the West Coast.

William E. Grant of the bureau of land management, Department of the Interior, who announced the leases in Los Angeles yesterday, said there were a total of 669,777.25 acres offered for lease. Of this total, 312,974.68 acres were picked up by successful bidders.

Total price paid for the leases was $12,807,586. Shell also purchases leases off Point Arena, Morro Bay, San Francisco and Eureka. Other bidders were Humble and Standard oil companies, which jointly won a successful bid for land off Morro Bay.

In another bid, Humble alone won a lease of land off Eureka, and Superior Oil Co. won lease of a Morro Bay parcel.

"It was all wildcat acreage," Grant said. "There's no production close to it."

Seashore Manager Leaving

James E. Cole, project manager for the Point Reyes National Seashore, will leave Marin County June 15 for a special park service study in Washington state.

Cole, of 565 Quietwood Drive, Marinwood, has led the Point Reyes seashore project through several stormy periods since 1958 when he was made regional chief of parks system planning in the service's San Francisco office.

He was assigned the job of project manager last September. Purchase negotiation to start acquisition of the proposed 53,000-acre objective has reached the point where some purchases will probably be made this month, Cole said today.

On May 17 President John F. Kennedy signed a supplemental act making five million dollars available for land purchase.

Since Cole took over as project manager, much mapping, land title studies, appraisals and negotiations have been completed. A park office was established at the Bear Valley Ranch.

Cole will be a representative on one of the Cascade study

PRAYERS FOR POPE

Rosary for Pope John XXIII is recited by Novices, in white, and Postulants at Santa Sabina Chapel in Dominican Convent Novitiate, San Rafael. Catholics and non-Catholics throughout the world today offered prayers for the dying pontiff who has done much to advance the union of Christians of all faiths. The Pope, during a five-hour period of consciousness early today, said he could observe his death "step by step. Now I am gently moving toward the end."

Vatican Says Pope John Is Showing How To Die

Pontiff Still Lives, But Growing Weaker

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—Pope John XXIII showed signs of growing physical and mental weakness, Vatican radio said tonight. But it added that "no prediction is possible."

The Vatican radio made its disclosure in an Italian language broadcast at 7:30 p.m.

While it made no prediction, it indicated that the ailing pope was losing ground in his fight for life. Just about an hour earlier, the Vatican radio had asked the faithful to join in prayer for a pope "who is showing us so simply and magnificiently how to die."

The obvious decline of the pope's condition came near the end of a day in which he twice gained and lost consciousness and sank closer to death, with doctors giving him "pain-killing injections" to ease the agony of his final hours.

Even as time ran out, the stout heart of the 81-year-old pontiff refused to stop. His stomach tumor, which is believed to be cancerous, plus added complications continued to give him pain.

STEP BY STEP

"I could observe my death step by step," the pope said during a five-hour period of consciousness early today. "Now I am gently moving toward the end."

There was no complaint, no mention of the searing pain wracking his once-robust body. Instead once again he offered his life for peace, for the church and for Christian unity.

The pope's fever was rising—it was reported around 101 degrees—but his heart was so strong he regained consciousness a second time this afternoon and blessed those waiting alongside his plain iron bed, including his confessor.

HOPE GONE

All hope was gone and those praying for the pope of peace, the son of a humble sharecropper, could only marvel at the tenacity with which he clung to life and the lucidity of his thoughts when awake.

"If the Holy Father still maintains a certain consciousness, his physique seems to have about worn out," a cardinal was quoted as saying.

The Vatican, prepared for death at any moment, announced that the pontiff at his

Auto Crash Victim Dies In Hospital

Arthur William Lane, 25, of San Francisco, died in San Francisco County Hospital yesterday as the result of head injuries suffered in an auto crash off Sir Francis Drake Boulevard at the foot of White's Hill at 2:30 a.m. Thursday.

Lane was the 15th auto fatality of the year in Marin County as compared to seven at the same time last year.

He was a passenger in a car driven by Charles Junior Cowan, 31, of Forest Knolls, which struck a tree at the foot of the hill.

The car veered off the boulevard near Olema Road, glanced off a utility pole went over an embankment into several trees.

Cowan, who suffered back injuries, was reported in fair condition today at San Rafael General Hospital.

Lane was treated at Marin General Hospital and then transferred yesterday to San Francisco.

Throughout the state there have been 32 traffic fatalities since 6 p.m. Wednesday night, the start of the Memorial Day weekend, according to United Press International.

Nine persons have drowned, three were killed in a plane crash and three other deaths were attributed to miscellaneous causes for a total of 47 fatalities.

JUNE BRIDES IN I-J TODAY

In addition to the regular magazine with its features you will find a 24-page special section with stories, photographs and advertisements designed to guide the bride, the bridegroom, their parents and the other principals involved in planning for the wedding ceremony.

Anxious Crowds Told No Miracle For Pope

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—"Jesus does not grant miracles to popes. It is we humble folks who receive them."

The speaker was a bearded Franciscan monk, one of the thousands gathered in St. Peter's Square to pray for Pope John XXIII and to await the end of his death agony.

He was replying to a graying woman who paused among the crowd with her shopping bag to look up at the pontiff's third-floor windows and remark: "We need a miracle."

"At least let him finish the council," said another woman in the group below the windows.

"But if last night he was dying and then this morning he sat up and drank his coffee, then perhaps it has happened," said a dark-haired woman in widow's black.

"There are no miracles for popes," the Franciscan said.

A middle-aged man in a business suit interrupted and pointed at St. Peter's Basilica.

"Miracles happen in there," he said. "They make saints all the time because of miracles."

But if the hushed crowd spoke of miracles they spoke of the pope in the past tense.

"He was a good man," said one.

"He was one of the people," said another.

And "he was a sainted man."

Thousands crowded St. Peter's Square last night, but as dawn broke this morning the crowd had dwindled to about 500 persons. Many of them prayed inside the basilica.

A black-veiled woman near the side altar stopped suddenly as she heard a workman's hammer in a far corner of the basilica and said: "They are getting ready for the funeral already."

The square and the area surrounding the Vatican became an oasis of quiet in the busy city. Police blocked traffic in the immediate area to lessen the noise reaching the pontifical sick room.

Late today a sudden pouring rain drenched the square and the 6,000 or so who had resumed the vigil beneath the window took shelter under the famed Bernini colonnades.

Again they knelt and prayed.

Yosemite Fire Guts Pavilion

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK (UPI) — A wooden structure built in 1898 and once used for open air dances, the Old Pavilion, was badly damaged yesterday in a fire.

The Pavilion, oldest building remaining in the old village section of Yosemite Valley, has been used in recent years for movies and church services. A one story building, it has an attic where movie equipment and other supplies were kept.

Park fire crews brought the blaze under control within 15 minutes. They said the fire was touched off by an overheated stove.

Park officials said they did not know whether the gutted structure would be torn down.

Driver Injured As Car Strikes Truck

George A. Banton, 51, of West Covina suffered cuts of the head and arm at 4:05 p.m. yesterday when his car struck a delivery truck that was stopped in a left turn lane along Highway 101, South of Diablo Avenue, Novato.

Banton was traveling about 30 miles per hour when he struck the rear of the truck driven by Graydon B. Young, 50, of Santa Rosa, the California Highway Patrol reported. Banton was treated at Novato General Hospital and released.

Oakland May Drop CD Plan

OAKLAND (UPI)—The city of Oakland is considering abandonment of its civil defense program although a city official warned the action would cut off federal financial support.

The city council yesterday instructed City Manager Wayne Thompson to study the possibilities of ending the $26,415 annual program.

Police Lieutenant Charles Hansen told the council meeting that Oakland has acquired hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of equipment from the federal government in conjunction with the civil defense project.

Hansen said most of the equipment is now owned by the city because government time limit restrictions have expired.

47 'Fallout' Balloons Found In One Cluster

A batch of 47 postcards, purportedly released into the air on balloons from Bodega Head on Memorial Day, was found in the San Rafael hills yesterday afternoon.

All the postcards, with punctured balloons attached, were found caught on a low tree branch near Elizabeth Way in the Fairhills area of San Rafael, according to the finders.

Mike Sullivan, 16, of 190 Glen Park Avenue, and John Sheets, 16, of 55 Woodland Avenue, said they found the cards in one bunch, tied together with a string.

Several other cards were reported in various parts of Marin yesterday, but this is the only report of cards in bulk at one spot. They were probably dumped in Fairhills by some busy balloon collector.

The cards on the balloons say that the balloons could represent a radioactive molecule. This is stated under a word, "WARNING!" in big red letters.

Hungry Thief Gets Fill

A hungry thief took a sack of groceries and a purse containing makeup and a checkbook from a Muir Beach car yesterday. Victim Frank H. McCreery of Sunset Way, told the sheriff's office the car had been parked in a parking lot at Almonte Boulevard and Shoreline Highway. The loss was set at $62.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Rep. Walters Dies Of Leukemia

WASHINGTON (AP)—Rep. Francis E. Walter, 69, chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, died yesterday after serving in the House longer than any Pennsylvania Democrat.

Walters

Walter, who was elected to a 16th consecutive term last Nov. 6, had been confined to Georgetown University Hospital for several weeks. His death was attributed to leukemia.

Walter's death puts Rep. Edwin E. Willis (D-La.) in line to become chairman of the Un-American Activities Committee.

Walter, whose home was in Easton in eastern Pennsylvania, was co-author of the controversial McCarran-Walter immigration act. He ranked eighth in seniority in the House and second on the Judiciary Committee.

Edith Hamilton Dies At 95

Hamilton

Miss Hamilton, equally fluent in Greek or Latin, was famous for her studies of classical civilizations. The first of her books, "The Greek Way," was published in 1930.

It was followed by "The Roman Way" in 1930; "Three Greek Plays," 1937; "Mythology," 1942; "Witness to the Truth," 1948 and "Introduction to Plutarch, selected lives and Essays," 1951.

Born of American parents in Dresden, Germany, she was raised in Fort Wayne, Ind., and graduated from Bryn Mawr College.

Miss Hamilton served as headmistress at Bryn Mawr School in Baltimore, Md., for more than 25 years before retiring in 1922.

Meredith Fund

NEW YORK (AP) — James H. Meredith, the first known Negro to attend the University of Mississippi, says a fund has been established in his name to provide loans and gifts to college and high school students. Ole Miss professors are among the fund's contributors, he adds.

Meredith said last night he plans to "devote a great portion of my energy to helping underprivileged Americans" obtain high school and college training.

He said he had contributed the first $1,000 to establish the "Meredith Education Fund."

Winds Off Florida

MIAMI (UPI)—A tropical disturbance moved through the Bahamas today, kicking up rain and wind gusts from Cuba to the Carolina coast.

The weather bureau at Miami said there was little possibility that the sprawling area of bad weather would develop into the first tropical storm of the year.

Highest winds were around 52 miles an hour, a forecaster said.

Navy Not Sure On Sub

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Navy said today it is now not sure that it has located the sunken nuclear submarine Thresher.

The navy said in a statement here:

"Detailed analysis of underwater photographs taken Thursday . . . determined that none could be definitely identified as showing the Thresher."

The photographs, taken by the oceanographic research vessel Conrad, were rushed to Washington by air last night and were subjected to exhaustive examination by Navy experts. It had been reported previously that there was little doubt the photos showed the hull of the lost submarine.

Consequently, officials said, the deep-diving bathyscath Trieste will remain in Boston "until more positive evidence of the exact location of the Thresher is known."

Fallout Increasing

WASHINGTON (AP)—Largely because of last year's Soviet nuclear tests there will be an increase in fallout this year. But the exposure to Americans is still too small to cause concern and a change in the national diet.

This report was made yesterday by the Federal Radiation Council, a top-level government group that surveys available radiation data.

The fallout radiation an American will take in over 30 years is equivalent to one-thirtieth the amount he'll get from natural radiation in the soil, rocks and building materials, the report said.

There will probably be an increase in strontium 90 dosage to bone—an increase that will deliver to new bone formed this year radiation equal to one-fourth the natural background radiation.

Wheat For China

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP)—Australia has sold another 46 million bushels of wheat to Communist China, Wheat Board chairman J V. Moroney said yesterday.

'Sit-In' Demonstration Continues At Capitol

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A determined band of State Capitol "sit-in" demonstrators, unperturbed by counter-picketing and hints they should abandon the idea, continued to protest today the lack of action on an administration-backed fair housing bill.

A spokesman for the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) said 20 more Negroes and whites were due to arrive this morning on a bus from Los Angeles to join the four day-old demonstration.

The demonstrators, whose numbers varied from only two or three at times to more than 50, said they planned to continue sitting on the second-floor rotunda "indefinitely."

The demonstration began Wednesday when about a dozen CORE members sat down quietly against a wooden railing only a few yards from the Senate and Assembly chambers.

But yesterday three Sacramento teen-agers appeared in a counter-picket move. They carried a sign which read: "Kill AB 1240," the fair housing bill.

"We feel this bill would take away from our rights as citizens," said one of the youths. "A homeowner has a right to sell his home to whomever he chooses."

The teen-agers left shortly after dark, however, while the CORE members spent their third straight night on the tile floor, mostly reading, playing cards and caring for babies.

The controversial bill, by Negro Assemblyman W. Byron Rumford (D-Berkeley) would give the state Fair Employment Practices Commission power to stop discrimination in the sale or rental of housing because of race, religion or national ancestry. It already has passed the Assembly but is hung up in the Senate governmental efficiency committee.

The bill is scheduled for a hearing June 5 and the demonstrators say they will stick around until then. The committee chairman said he delayed the bill because other measures were on deadline.

Rumford said the demonstrators were "misdirected" and probably "not very effective."

Stinson Aid Station Set

Stinson Beach Fire Protection District commissioners have assumed the responsibility for a disaster first aid station and supplies are expected to be brought to Stinson Beach within about two weeks.

Equipment, including leg splints, cots, first aid team kits, water cans, paper blankets and litter cots, will be stored in the basement of the Community Church building, Harriet M. Greene, district assistant secretary said today.

The station, part of the state's disaster and civil defense plan, will be handled by volunteer firemen and the Stinson Beach Ambulance Corps.

Sweeping Vote Bill Proposed

SACRAMENTO (AP)—A sweeping new law touching every aspect of election campaign finances in California has been proposed in the legislature.

It would require detailed accountings not only by candidates but by anyone who performs services. Copies would go to district attorneys and tax collectors.

One provision limits what newspapers, television or radio stations can charge for political advertising. Another carries a new "squal space" dictum for political billboards.

The author, Assemblyman Tom Bane (D-North Hollywood), said he will seek a hearing on the legislation before the Assembly Elections and Reapportionment Committee next Wednesday.

Bane took an obscure bill and tacked on amendments which run 23 pages in the Assembly Journal. The Assembly approved the amendments routinely Wednesday and sent the measure back to committee.

Bane, chairman of the Assembly Rules Committee, said he set out to draft a "tough bill" after he joined other Democrats on the Elections Committee and rejected the so-called Purity of Elections bill backed by Gov. Edmund G. Brown.

The administration measure, by Assemblyman Gordon Winton Jr. (D-Merced) sought to tighten present law but Bane said he felt it didn't go far enough.

"What I have attempted to do in these amendments is to cover the complete field of political activity," he said "Everyone is touched.

Here's how the Bane bill would work:

Every candidate for any office in California—even if you run for county central committee—would have to file a campaign statement within 35 days after the election. So would campaign committees.

"Contributions" would include services of employees, reduced rates for services, use of billboard space, radio or television time.

Excluded would be: donations below $50, "certain news items, comments or articles" not involving payment and such other things as use of a person's home as a meeting place.

Campaign statements would be filed with county clerks, who would send copies to the secretary of state, attorney general and district attorney.

The attorney general is directed to send copies to the State Franchise Tax Board and director of internal revenue.

Nominations or elections would be voided for violations.

'Public Is Being Fooled By Phone Co.'

By LOREN MacARTHUR

The public is being fooled by Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co., a psychologist who wants letter prefixes on telephone numbers charged at yesterday's hearing of the State Public Utilities Commission.

The company must be planning sweeping changes in its telephone system, said Jack Block, because merely switching letter prefixes to numbers won't give the company one more telephone number.

"This is a mathematical conclusion and it is not contestable," said Block, a psychologist with the University of California at Berkeley and an active member of the Anti-Digit Dialing League. The league is contesting PT&T's attempt to eliminate letter prefixes. The company claims the change is necessary because it is running out of phone numbers.

"The company has not told the public that other big changes are necessary," said Block. "It won't help them to switch to all-number dialing without first making the other changes."

He listed two ways the company could change its telephone system without touching the letter prefixes and still allow an astronomical amount of useable telephone numbers —4.3 billion, or one billion more than the world's population. There are 82 million telephones in the United States, a number the telephone company expects to jump to 200 million by 1980.

One of the two methods, according to Block, is already in use in Marin, dialing "one" for calls out of your immediate area "Dial one," he said, is part of complex "number counting" electronic equipment. Such equipment counts the number of electronic impulses when a caller dials and directs the call to the proper area.

The second method is "gerrymandering" the area codes. If the area codes were increased from the present 160 to 800, the company would have 4.3 billion possible phone numbers, Block said.

The bookie never got to say what he thought of all-digit dialing. Commission examiner William W. Dunlop told the masked man he couldn't testify unless he gave his name.

"There are still some romantic areas left in San Francisco that don't appreciate identification," said attorney Melvin Belli, who is representing the league. "But I assure you this gentleman can testify to the trouble the bookies are having with digit dialing."

But Dunlop said the nameless man would have to go, which he did, still masked.

"I'm indignant that a society that already foists on us a number of irritations is willing to add to them instead of cutting them down," said Robert Krasnow, a Berkeley medical doctor, who summed up the opinions of the remaining witnesses.

No further date for the continuation of the hearing was set by Dunlop at the request of Francis N. Marshall, attorney for the telephone company. Marshall said he is tied up with other telephone company litigation.

Driving Lesson Ends With A Real Bang!

A Fairfax father was giving his daughter driving lessons at 1:05 p.m. yesterday when things went awry.

The car swerved off Oak Manor Drive, west of Gregory Drive, struck several low brick retaining walls and crashed into a garage.

Judy Maria Mahood, 16, of 415 Cascade Drive, told highway patrol officers she became confused and lost control of the car.

Her father, Robert Allen Mahood, 41, said that as the car gained speed going downhill his daughter applied the brakes, but also stepped on the accelerator.

Mahood suffered a possible fractured right arm and his daughter facial cuts and bruises. They were treated at Marin General Hospital and transferred to Kaiser Hospital where they were released.

The car came to a stop after crashing into the garage at the home of Richard W. Horst, 327 Oak Manor Drive.

Mrs. Horst said today the car leaped a brick retaining wall and ploughed through the closed garage doors. It hit her freezer and rammed into the inner wall foundations, she said. Mrs. Horst estimated the damage at $3,000.

The highway patrol also reported damage to brick walls at the homes of A. H. Metzelaar, 345 Oak Manor Drive; R. J. Sanders, 339 Oak Manor Drive, and S. J. Brodie, 333 Oak Manor Drive.

The CHP has filed a complaint against Miss Mahood for excessive speed for the conditions and for driving without her learner's permit in her possession.

Marin RCA Crews Accept Contract

RCA workers at stations at Inverness and Bolinas voted, with fellow workers across the nation this morning to stay on the job and agreed to a two-year extension of the union contract.

The contract provided for a $3 a day across-the-board raise immediately for all workers and a $3.50 increase for most workers next year.

The employees left their posts at the change of the shift at 8 a.m. today to meet at the West Marin School to vote on the contract, tentatively agreed to following a 22 hour negotiating session in Washington.

The old contract had expired at midnight. Negotiations started on April 15.

House Painting Tiff Becomes Sign Battle

When William Duff began painting the offices of his brother, Dr. Stephen A. Duff, in a frame house at 1104 Irwin Street, San Rafael, the Painters' Local 83, AFL-CIO, stepped in with a picket and the claim that Dr. Duff was violating painters' hours and working conditions.

Dr. Duff countered with a sign saying, "Painters union objects to my brother painting my house. He uses five-inch instead of four-inch brush." Robert Bennet, union business agent, said brush width is not an issue. It's just that the doctor's home is in a business district, otherwise the union would not object.

Koolish Witness In Kenny Swindle

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (UPI)—United Press International on May 29 erroneously identified Philip H. Koolish as one of five men convicted on charges of swindling the Sister Kenny Foundation.

Philip H. Koolish was not a defendant in the mail fraud trial. He was called by the government as a witness and testified on March 29. The UPI regrets the error.

teams, according to Lawrence C. Merriam, regional park director in San Francisco, who announced the new assignment.

The study arises from an agreement between the secretaries of agriculture and interior to explore all resources, including park and recreation, of federal lands in the North Cascade Mountains in Washington. Findings of the study will give a basis for deciding how the land can be best used in public interest.

Cole said he is sorry to leave the Point Reyes project, but he believes the Cascade study is vital.

"We have an energetic secretary of interior and a sympathetic president," he said. "This is the time to strike" for additional land acquisition and development."

Cole said his successor will be announced soon. Meanwhile, his assistant, Gordon Patterson, will have the job of continuing the project and working negotiations to completion.

Cole previously was superintendent of Joshua Tree National Monument in Southern California. A graduate of the University of California at Los Angeles, he started his park service career as a nationalist at Yosemite National Park.

He and his wife Jessie have a teen-age daughter, Christine.

Girl Students Elect At Terra Linda High

Judy Aubel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Aubel of 805 Greenberry Lane, Marinwood, is the new president of Associated Girl Students of Terra Linda High School.

She will serve for one year, beginning in the fall semester. Other new officers of the student club are Pam Titus, vice president; Marilyn McLean, secretary; Jennifer Dejung, treasurer; and Lori Dimuro, historian.

Larkspur Fire Dance

A benefit dance to buy equipment for the Larkspur Volunteer Fire Department will begin at 9 p.m. today in the Rose Bowl Chateau in Larkspur. Del Courtney's musical ensemble will play, and featured entertainers will be Freddie Morgan, formerly with Spike Jones' band, and Jan Collins.

Notary Commissioned

SACRAMENTO (CNS)—Secretary of State Frank M. Jordan today announced issuance of a notary public commission to Donald A. Beacock, 19 Belvedere Avenue, Belvedere.

San Marin Maps Due Planners

Tentative subdivision maps for two new San Marin units will be considered Monday by the Marin County Planning Commission.

Both units, on the former Freitas "C" Ranch, near Novato, are proposed for single family homes. San Marin Unit No. 3 is planned for subdivision of 67 lots on 13 acres, and San Marin Unit No. 7 is planned for 106 lots on 31 acres.

Eleven new streets are proposed for the two units. The items are numbers 5 and 7 on the commission's agenda. The planning commission will meet at 9 a.m. in the Civic Center.

A request for permission to install a 96-square-foot Neon sign at the Bourbon Shop in the Marinwood Shopping Center will be considered as agenda item 31. Under county sign regulations, only 25 square feet are allowed.

Rezoning of about 20 acres of land west of Sutro Avenue, Novato, from limited agricultural to single family residential will be considered as agenda item 28. The rezoning is requested for development of Pleasant Valley Subdivision Unit No. 1.

Consolidated Holdings, Inc., has applied for an adjustment to allow construction of apartments on Olema Road at Sir Francis Drake Boulevard near Fairfax. The adjustment would permit construction 10 and 15 feet between apartment buildings rather than the required 20 feet. The request will be item 29 on the agenda.

Man Freed In Swim Hole Tiff

Vernon Ventura, 31, of Richmond, accused of tossing a young housewife into the swimming hole at Taylor Park on Memorial Day, was freed without charge yesterday.

Deputy Dist. Atty. Thomas T. Storer said no formal complaint was filed against Ventura because no one came in to sign a complaint and no report was turned in to the district attorney on the incident.

Royal Marine CO Visits Muir Woods

M. C. Cartwright-Taylor commandant of the British Royal Marine Corps, was to visit Muir Woods National monument this afternoon accompanied by his wife and a number of American Marines stationed in the Bay Area.

Hoping to see Cartwright-Taylor was Paul Brand of San Anselmo, who served with the top officer in 1942-46 when Brand was a sergeant in the Royal Marine Corps. Brand is now a U.S. citizen.

POPE

own request would be buried in the Basilica of St. John in Lateran and not in St. Peter's as have so many popes before him.

The great Basilica of St. John is in the ancient City of Rome, now a working-class district, and is even older than St. Peter's. It is regarded as the mother church of Christendom.

The Vatican also announced plans for the selection of a successor to Pope John. They were the age-old plans by which the sacred college of cardinals is locked in secret conclave 15 to 18 days after the death of a pope, not to emerge again until the successor is known.

"The robust fiber of the pope still is fighting against the inexorable illness," it said at one point. "John XXIII appears tranquil but is once more slowly losing consciousness."

It urged, "Let us pray that God may give eternal rest to this faithful servant."

The pope is suffering from a stomach tumor reported to be cancerous plus complications including peritonitis, anemia respiratory trouble requiring the use of an oxygen tent.

"The pope's life is going out slowly, like a candle," Vatican Radio said this morning. "The end of his agony can take place at any moment."

New Terra Linda High Parents Will Meet

Parents of new students who will enter Terra Linda High School next September will meet school officials at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the school gymnasium.

Questions will be answered about classes and extra-curricular activities. Principal Webster Wilson will discuss grading policies and team teaching programs. Parents will also be able to tour the school buildings.

$300 Mare Stolen

Mrs. Nancy I. Pierce, 575 Atherton Ave., Novato, told sheriff's officers yesterday her $300 black mare had been stolen from a field near her home.

County School Resignations Will Be Topic

Resignations of six persons from the County Schools office will be discussed when the County Board of Education meets at 8 p.m. Monday in the board room at the Civic Center.

Two of the resignations are new, bringing to 13 the number to quit the office in the past two months. The two, however, appeared to have no connection with the numerous recent charges of "mal-administration" and "incompetent administrators" in the schools office by those quitting.

Elmer E. Shafer, instructor at the San Quentin Prison School, said recent heart attacks have caused his resignation.

Hildegard C. Abramson, special education teacher, gave "family reasons" as the cause of her resignation. She will teach at the private Meadowsweet School in Corte Madera. Her resignation was made two months ago but has not been mentioned at a board meeting until now.

Also to be considered by the board is the resignation of Harold Simpson, psychologist, who last week criticized the administration of Supt. Virgil S. Hollis and said there is "deep trouble" in the superintendent's office.

The board will discuss recommendations for employment of six new employees, including five special instructors for physically handicapped or mentally retarded children.

Catholic High Students Win

Two students from Marin Catholic High School have been awarded scholarships to the University of San Francisco.

The winners are George E. Fedoroff, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Fedoroff, 15 East Terrace, Tiburon, and Peter J. Muzio, son of Mr. and Mrs. Victor A. Muzio, 37 Marquard Avenue, San Rafael.

The university did not report the extent of their scholarships.

Jr. Livestock Queen Named

Judy Albini, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rinaldo Albini of Bodega, has been named queen of the 14th annual West Marin Junior Livestock Show to be held at Point Reyes Station, June 22-23.

Princesses for the event, sponsored by the West Marin Lions Club, are Carol Buoy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wayland Buoy of Five Brooks, and Mary Jordan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Jordan of Point Reyes Station.

False Identification Jails San Rafael Man

Keith F. Kluever, 20, of the Lincoln Hotel, San Rafael, has been charged with possession of false identification after being picked up by San Rafael police on a traffic warrant from Fairfax.

Police say Kluever had a selective service card for Laurence Ray Parrott, 9 Hansen Road, Novato, and refused to say how he obtained it. He is being held in lieu of a total of $1,362.50 bail.

MARIN FIRE CALLS

YESTERDAY:

11:42 a.m. — Fire hydrant knocked over at 5th and D streets, San Rafael. Car driven by Ernest Muzatko of 20 H Street, San Rafael. Damage not estimated.

8:06 a.m.—House trailer gutted belonging to Rod Williams of Meadow Brook Stables, Novato. Damage and cause of fire under investigation by Marin County Sheriff's Office.

10:35 p.m.—Rubbish burning in rear of Goodman Builder's Emporium, 369 Third Street, San Rafael. No damage.

Picnickers Squirt Woman In Face

A Bolinas Beach housewife tried to douse a beach campfire with a garden hose on Memorial Day, but the picnickers turned the hose around and squirted her instead, Sheriff's Deputy Robert Bertrand reported yesterday.

Beatrice Ida Fitzgerald, 52, said she and her husband were at their summer home on Terrace Avenue in Bolinas. She saw a fire burning on the beach below her house about eight to 10 feet from the cliff and retaining wall.

She said she asked the picnickers to put out the fire or move it away because an ordinance prohibits burning within 25 feet of the cliff or retaining wall. The picnickers included a man and two women.

Mrs. Fitzgerald said a Marin fireman came by and told the group to move the fire. The fireman asked Mrs. Fitzgerald to call the fire department if the fire was not out in five minutes.

The fire kept burning. Mrs. Fitzgerald told officers she was hosing her windows anyway and so decided to put out the fire with the garden hose. But when she tried, the man took the hose away from her and squirted her in the face, she complained to the sheriff.

Fuddy Duddy Business Is Brisk

Ted Holmboe, co-owner of the store, said today he is actually not selling the badges but has printed about two dozen which he has given away mostly to merchants.

However, city councilman Michael Wornum, who stirred up a storm a week ago when he called Mill Valley merchants "a group of fuddy duddies," would not accept a badge, Holmboe said.

"He came in and I told him I would make him one," said the merchant. "He declined the honor."

The badges are letters embossed on a magnetic, brown tape and, when the back is peeled from the tape, they will adhere to most any surface.

Terra Linda High Party Is Slated

A party for Terra Linda High School international exchange students will be held at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday in the school cafeteria.

Honored guests will be American Field Service students Ahmet Esirtgen of Turkey and Mona Wicknertz of Sweden and Terra Linda students Edward Schroeder and Susan West, who will leave next month for Austria and Japan under the experiment in International Living program.

Students, parents and teachers will have a chance to say farewell to the students at the dinner party. An extra international touch will be the serving of Chinese food.

Suitcase, $245 Taken

A suitcase, containing a $245 money clip and a $160 suit was reported stolen from a car in Tiburon, sheriff's officers said. Prescott C. Pervere, 2260 Mar East, told officers yesterday his suitcase had been left in the car at his home when he entered a local hospital May 21.

Academy Youth Honored

David Good, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Good of Kentfield today received the California Savings and Loan League's Outstanding Award at San Rafael Military Academy.

Dr. Sumner Walter, academy headmaster, presented Good with a bronze medallion and $100 check during the annual Awards Day ceremonies at the campus this morning.

Good, who entered the Academy in 1949, is a member of the National Honor Society chapter at the Academy. In his senior year he was promoted to the rank of Cadet Captain for his leadership among students.

He also was editor of the school yearbook, "The Adjutant," secretary of the student council and Red Cross representative on campus.

Good plans to attend Willamette University in Oregon and study business administration.

W. C. Fields Film

The Marin Film Society will show "The Night of the Hunter," a W. C. Fields film, "The Pharmacist" and a John Hubley cartoon on Bonnier's Barge, Waldo Point, Sausalito, June 8 at 8 p.m.

Legion Post Sending Two To Boys State

Wilkins Post 37 of the American Legion in San Rafael will send two youths to the Boys State convention in Sacramento June 22-29.

Peter Del Tredici, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Del Tredici of San Anselmo, will represent Marin Catholic High School, Bob Cooney, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Cooney of San Rafael, will represent Terra Linda High School.

Del Tredici, who has been on the honor roll since he was a freshman, recently was elected president of the junior class. He formerly was vice president of the countrywide Junior Red Cross Council and currently is secretary. He also participates in basketball and track.

Cooney is president of the Service Honorary Club, president of the Terra Linda Block TL, the lettermen's club, and was recently elected student body president.

He played football and baseball for the Terra Linda Jaybees and played trumpet in the school band.

More than 800 boys will attend Boys State to study government in action, and two will be elected to represent California at Boys Nation in Washington, D.C.

Bike Shop Entry In Corte Madera

Corte Madera police reported this morning that someone broke into the Corte Madera Bike Shop, 5775 Paradise Drive, last night by using a glass cutter on the front door.

John H. Lee, shop owner, was taking inventory today to determine the loss, police said. Lee discovered the break-in at 8:05 a.m. today. He had left the shop locked at 6 p.m. yesterday.

This is the second time in the past six weeks that the shop has been entered, police reported. They said it appears to be the work of juveniles.

Bundle Of Stars In Prep Tournament; Finals Tonight

By RALPH CHATOIAN

If yesterday was an indication of what was to come today in the finals of the first Redwood Invitational Baseball Tournament at Albert Park in San Rafael, prep fans can watch a bundle of stars perform.

The opening round four games were battled yesterday and five more tilts were on tap for today, leading up to the championship game at 8 o'clock tonight.

Yesterday's action saw Santa Cruz down San Leandro 6-4, St. Elizabeth's clobber Pacific 15-1, College Park drop Hogan 3-1, and San Jose whip host Redwood 4-1.

In semi-final action today, Santa Cruz of the Coast Counties League was to meet with St. Elizabeth's of the Catholic League at noon, and College Park of the Diablo County League was to tangle with San Jose of the Mount Hamilton League at 2 p.m. The winners of those two games will meet tonight in the final game at 8 o'clock.

Consolation play matched San Leandro of the Alameda League against Pacific of the same league at 10 a.m., and Hogan of the North Bay League against Redwood of the Marin Athletic League at 4 p.m.

In last night's first game, Santa Cruz's Mark Schultz, a catcher who bats in the clean-up spot, did just that in the seventh inning to provide the key blow of the game. With the score knotted at 4-4 in the top of the seventh, Schultz unloaded a two-run homer over the barricade in deep center, more than 425 feet from the plate.

His four-master provided the margin in Santa Cruz's 6-4 win. His first time at bat he cracked a double. The major league scouts were still murmuring today about this kid.

Winning pitcher was Stan Pillsbury who relieved starter Dave Netto in the sixth inning. Loser was Bob Foderaro.

St. Elizabeth's sluggers jumped all over Pacific hurler Benny Ramos for 15 runs in the first four innings which called a halt to the proceedings after five innings. Tourney rules call for the game to end after five innings if a team is ahead by 10 runs.

St. Elizabeth's shortstop Albert Strange crashed a three-run homer in the fourth and pitcher Kevin Hardy, who already has a four-year scholarship at Notre Dame, smashed a triple, double and single for a perfect 3 for 3. Hardy notched up five runs batted in and Strange four.

St. Elizabeth's second sacker Tom Hansen had three singles in three trips and centerfielder Charles Cecil had a double and single. Hardy picked up the victory, allowing only three hits.

In the third game yesterday, College Park used three walks, a single and a ground out to collect two runs in the opening frame and added another run in the second inning and that's all they needed. Hogan picked up a run in the sixth but it was not enough.

There was a scarcity of hits in that game as College Park picked up three and Hogan only two. Winning pitcher was Terry Henson who went the entire seven inning on the hill.

In the final game of the evening, Redwood pitcher Scott Davi struck out the first nine batters he faced before the roof crashed in during the fourth frame.

The leadoff batter in the fourth, Preston Oka, grounded out ot second, snapping Davi's strike out string at nine. Then Frank Volpi hit a short fly in right field which Giant outfielder Steve Minutoli seemed to lose in the lights, as the ball fell in for a double.

First baseman Sam Williams smashed a drive into right field for a double, but Volpi held up when he thought Minutoli would make the catch, and wound up on third base.

ALL SMILES — Santa Cruz High School catcher Mark Schultz (left) and baseball coach Bill Dodge are all smiles as they chat during yesterday's final game of the opening round of the Redwood Invitational tourney. Schultz hit a home run over the centerfield wall in an earlier game to give his team a 6-4 victory.

FINAL OUT—San Jose first baseman Sam Williams (24) heads for the dugout after making final putout of last night's game with Redwood as Giants' pinch batter Curt Richardson reaches first base too late. Richardson had grounded to the shortstop who made the throw to first. Redwood lost the game 4-1.

INDY RECORD

Parnelli's Win Worth $148,581

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—Parnelli Jones leaves for New York today holding the winner's share of a record 500-mile race purse and a one-punch decision over contender Eddie Sachs.

Jones, a 29-year-old charger from Torrance, Calif., picked up the big check at the annual victory dinner last night. He and Sachs, 36, Detroit, had tangled earlier at a motel with an exchange of "liar" epithets in a controversy over oil spilled during the race Thursday.

There was a lot of talk about oil left on the Indianapolis Motor Speedway asphalt, with Sachs contending that oil from Jones' car caused him to spin out of the race. But no formal protest was filed.

The total purse of $493,530.60 and the first place payoff of $148,581 to Jones and car owner J. C. Agajanian both set records. Drivers work on percentage, usually 40 per cent.

YOU'RE A LIAR

The spilled-oil controversy had been going on for nearly 24 hours when Jones and Sachs started talking near a motel bar and Sachs brought it up again. Witnesses said each man called the other a liar and Jones said, "you call me a liar again and I'll bust you right in the mouth."

Sachs replied, "All right, you're a liar."

Jones landed one punch to the face and the two wrestled to the floor before spectators separated them. Sachs' mouth was puffed up as he arose.

Drill Site Wins

BUILDERS ENTER STATE TOURNEY

Billings-Hutchison Builders of Marin, champs of the recent San Rafael Invitational Tournament, trek to Oakland tomorrow to compete in the first round of the California State Semi-Pro Baseball Tournament against Milan Jewelers, champions of the Alameda Winter League. Winners will advance to state finals in Martinez next month.

Johnson Solid Favorite To Retain Title On TV Tonight

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—The world light heavyweight crown will be on the line tonight and champion Harold Johnson is a solid favorite to retain it in a 15-round fight with Willie Pastrano.

The nationally televised engagement — ABC at 7 p.m. PDT.—is set for the Las Vegas Convention Center.

Among the 5,500 patrons on hand will be heavyweight champion Sonny Liston, whose title Johnson might seek if he gets by the fast, fancy tactics of Willie the Wisp, from North Miami Beach, Fla.

Also slated to be at ringside is Mauro Mina of Peru, the No. 1 contender in the 175-pound division. The Peruvian was offered a shot at Johnson but bowed out, claiming an arm injury.

Johnson, from Philadelphia, at 34 is still a powerful puncher, though admittedly not as fast with his hands as in younger years. He has stopped 32 opponents in his career of 81 matches and has not lost a bout since 1955.

Pastrano, 28, noted for his hit-and-run style, after 13 years of ring warfare is getting his first crack at a world championship.

He started boxing in his native New Orleans and has had his share of success and disappointment. More important to him, and a problem for Johnson, Pastrano has never been knocked off his feet in 83 engagements.

Co-promoters Mel Greb and Jack Doyle guaranteed Johnson $37,000 and Pastrano $21,250. It develops that Harold's purse includes $2,000 for training expenses and Pastrano's odd total includes $1,250 for similar needs.

Neither boxer anticipated any difficulty making the required 175 pounds. Neither has been over the figure in competing drills this week.

Scoring will be five points for the winner of a round, four or less to the loser and five apiece for an even round.

Both the three-knockdown-in-a-round rule and the mandatory eight-count for a knockdown will be in effect.

USC Nips Beavers In Far Western Baseball Playoff

CORVALLIS, Ore., (UPI)—USC took a one-game lead into today's action with Oregon State in the District 8 playoff to determine the Far West representative in the college baseball World Series.

The Trojans took yesterday's opener 6-5 as Larry Sandel and Bud Hollowell each collected a pair of one-run singles.

Al Lehrer drove in three runs with a double and single and Fred Peters whacked in the other two for the Beavers.

S.A. Merchants Battle Ongaro

The San Anselmo Merchants will take on the Ongaro Plumbers in a semi-pro baseball game tomorrow at 1:30 p.m. at San Anselmo's Memorial Park.

San Anselmo downed Mill Valley's Merchants 11-7 Thursday, with Laddie Richardson picking up the victory.

FRUSTRATED GIANTS

New Way To Lose

Combined AP & UPI

ST. LOUIS—"I've never seen a game won like that," said Johnny Keane, St. Louis Cardinal manager.

He saw the winning run score when the league-leading San Francisco Giants let an infield fly drop untouched in the ninth inning last night. The play was even stranger because the closest man to the ball, which fell between first and second base, was Willie Mays, the Giants' centerfielder.

Mays, playing shallow in the bases-loaded, none-out situation, raced in only to miss the ball by a step.

Stan Musial lifted the pop-up and Curt Flood, running at his own risk, scored the run that gave the Cardinals a 6-5 triumph and second place, two games behind the Giants.

"I never did call for the ball," said a forlorn Mays, who angrily drop kicked a glove into right field after the heartbreaking play. "I didn't hear anyone call for it."

"Mays tried to scoop the ball on the short hop and maybe get the man at the plate," said Billy Pierce, who pitched to Musial. "But it bounced away."

The play climaxed an inning of frustration for the Giants as the Cardinals won it without getting the ball out of the infield. Don Larsen relieved Gaylord Perry to start the ninth and walked Curt Flood. Bill White, whose two-run homer in the seventh had tied the score at 5-5, hit a grounder to Giants second baseman Peterson and threw wide to shortstop Bowman in an attempt to force Flood.

Bob Bolin relieved Larsen and allowed Dick Groat to load the bases on a bunt single. Billy Pierce relieved Bolin and forced Musial to pop up behind first base. He was called out on the infield fly rule.

Peterson lost the ball and couldn't get to it. Mays had his eyes on the ball all the time and streaked in from center field to try and make the catch. He probably would have if Peterson didn't cut in front of him at a crucial moment, forcing Willie to break his stride.

The ball fell just fair with no Giant laying a glove on it and Flood scored easily from third with the winning run. Larsen was tagged with the defeat, his third against no wins.

One bright spot for the Giants was that Mays finally broke out of his slump, which had extended to 17 times at bat without a hit. He had three hits, including a double, drove in two runs, scored twice and stole a base.

On other matters, President Warren Giles of the National League yesterday rejected Cincinnati Reds Manager Fred Hutchinson's protest of the May 29 game that the Reds lost to the Giants 5-4.

Hutchinson claimed that plate umpire Shag Crawford had acted illegally in allowing Giant pitcher Juan Marichal to take more than eight warmup pitches at the beginning of an inning.

"It is sometimes necessary for umpires to use their judgment in an unusual situation," Giles ruled. He said Crawford acted properly under the circumstances.

Stan's Team Is Downed In 13th

Stan's Sport Shop softballers dropped a 13-inning thriller, 6-5, to the Santa Rosa Athletic Club Thursday in Santa Rosa.

Santa Rosa came from behind, 5-0, to tie the game in the bottom of the sixth and finally win the game in the bottom of the 13th on two hits and a Stan's error.

Nolan Wilson with a double and single, and Duane Irving with two singles paced Stan's offensive attack. Stan's will play a doubleheader tomorrow at 6 p.m. at Albert Park against H and K Liquor of San Francisco.

SHEIK ON THE BEACH

You may never be shipwrecked . . . but we'll bet this fashion by Emil de John of Jerry Marks would weather even that! The reason: Triton's perky pique of Celanese Fortrel polyester and cotton is as wash-and-wear as they come—sails through sudsings and sunnings with nary a care. Brass buttoned shirt jacket in the same sensational fabric completes the outfit.

Seven MarinitesWill Serve On San Francisco Bay ScoutCouncil

Seven persons from Marin County were elected to serve in positions of leadership in the new San Francisco Bay Girl Scout Council which was officially organized at a meeting Wednesday in the Fairmont Hotel in San Francisco. Nearly 1,000 adult Girl Scout volunteers attended.

They are Mrs. Frank E. Duhme Jr. of Tiburon, who will serve as vice president, Arthur Latno Jr. and Mesdames James D. Adams, Barrett Hindes, Victors Furst and Thomas Mellon, who will be members- at-large of the board of directors and Mrs. Arthur Collbran, who will serve on the nominating committee.

The gavel for the new council was presented by the Redwood Empire Assn. represented by C. D. Kirkpatrick, association vice president and vice president of Western Greyhound Lines.

THE NEW COUNCIL is the second largest council in the United States and will serve over 40,000 girls. It is the result of the consolidation of councils in Alameda, Contra Costa, Marin, San Francisco and San Mateo Counties.

Leaders of other community organizations joined the scouts for a birthday luncheon following the business meeting at which Mrs. Herbert C. Schuckle of Baltimore, a member of the Girl Scout national board of directors, was luncheon speaker.

MRS. SCHUCKLE called for the Girl Scouts to devote their efforts to world peace for the "Energy of the atom must be matched by energy of spirit."

"The first 51 years have been a prelude. It is now time for the curtain to go up on a command performance in which each member has an important part to play in our anxious quest for peace."

Mrs. Schuckle said that Juliette Low, founder of the Girl Scouts saw the organization as a potential step for world peace. She had to buck the theory of the "weaker sex" and prove that women and girls could be self reliant and think and act for themselves. By learning to live the promise of the Girl Scouts, Mrs. Low believed girls could help to elevate humanity.

"Our challenge today is more difficult," Mrs. Schuckle continued. "We must counteract self interest, materialism and mistrust. Self interest must be replaced by a sensitivity to the needs of others and mistrust by love, care and understanding. We can't command or legislate love. It is a natural impulse for a child. Our role as an adult is to help the natural good express itself."

Mrs. Schuckle reminded her listeners that the Scout slogan "Do a good turn daily" typifies this obligation to humanity. The good turn done by the smallest members eventually grow into service projects for the older groups.

"BY LEARNING to accept differences in people, we take the first step toward a better world," she continued emphasizing that one of the Girl Scout laws is to be a sister to every other scout.

"There are three and one-half million Girl Scouts. This is an impressive statistic. We are now the second largest service organization in the United States. But we must keep the girls in scouting long enough for scouting to get into them," she said.

MARIN'S SOCIAL WHIRL

By FLORENCE DONNELLY

Several large dinner parties will follow tomorrow's graduation ceremonies at the San Rafael Military Academy. The Jack Blaines of San Rafael are entertaining 75 guests at Dominic's. The dinner honors their two sons, David Bradley Blaine, who is graduating from the academy, and Stephen, member of the eighth grade graduating class at SRMA. David will attend Stanford University.

The John Lesoines of Ross are giving a buffet dinner at their home for the graduating cadets, including their son, Robert, and some of their parents. Dr. and Mrs. J. J. Uldall of Kentfield will be hosts at a buffet supper honoring their son, Rick, who is graduating from the academy.

This is a big weekend for the cadets. Tonight's senior ball in the gym will be followed by a breakfast at Rafael Racquet Club, which will be attended by the 38 graduates and their dates. The baccalaureate sermon will be delivered tomorrow afternoon by Episcopal Bishop James A. Pike in the chapel at the academy. It will be followed by a tea on the lawn near the chapel honoring Bishop and Mrs. Pike.

THE MANNEQUIN LEAGUE of Marin's annual charity ball will be held tonight at Peacock Gap Golf and Country Club, with proceeds going to the Marin Society for Crippled Children and Adults. Several cocktail parties are being given before the dance.

The league president, Mrs. William Donohoe, and her husband will have as their guests Dr. and Mrs. Al Minton, Messrs. and Mesdames James Decker, James McCutcheon, Rex Golobic, John Egan, Herbert Kaufman Jr., James Muscat, Harold Parker, Roy Lucchini, Jose Alicastro, Thomas Guerin, Richard Williams, William McDevitt, William Larson, J. Marin Women

St. Rita's Guild President Enjoys Sewing And Reading

Mrs. Richard A. Bettencourt will be installed as president of St. Rita's Women's Guild of Fairfax at ceremonies Monday in the parish hall.

Mrs. Bettencourt, a native of Marin, has been a member of the guild for eight years and has served as recording secretary and vice president.

SHE HAS ALSO served as president of St. Anselm's Young Ladies Institute. Plans for the coming year include fall and spring fashion shows, a wine tasting party and a rummage sale.

Mrs. Bettencourt was graduated from Dominican College and taught elementary school before her marriage. She is now the organist for St. Rita's School choir, and at home enjoys reading and sewing.

The Bettencourts are the parents of five children, Maryanna, 13; Teresa, 10; Paula, 9; Anthony, 5 and Cecilia, 4, and their mothers' favorite pastime is picnicking, boating and enjoying other recreations with her family.

MRS. MARTIN FREDERICKS is chairman of the installation and the Rev. Jeremiah V. Gleeson, pastor of St. Rita's will install the following officers: Mesdames Bettencourt, president; Arthur L. O'Leary, vice president; Richard Chase, recording secretary; Daniel Dever, financial secretary; John Cuneo, treasurer; John Colwell, auditor.

Members of the board are Mesdames Jack Eaton, H. L. Parker, Nello Ciucci, Emerson Lasater and Daniel Miller.

FLORAL HAIRDOS

Last year's hair piece fad has been replaced by this Spring's hairdos sprouting elaborate floral arrangements like this "Floral Corral" shown in front and back views on a model. A hair stylist used a seven inch length of velvet ribbon sewn with artificial flowers to create the gay effect.

Newlyweds Residing In Fairfield

Fairfield is the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Eugene Emerick (Linda Dene Briggs), who were married recently at Redwoods Presbyterian Church in Larkspur. The Rev. John Hamilton performed the ceremony.

The bride, who is the daughter of Mrs. Charles M. Neil of Mill Valley, was given in marriage by her father, William C. Briggs. She wore a short white peau de soie gown, and her attendants wore powder blue lace sheath dresses. They were Linda Schwartz of Petaluma, maid of honor, Ronette Smiley of San Rafael.

The bridegroom, who is the son of Mrs. Paul K. London of Portland, Ore., was served by Jack Neuberry of Larkspur as best man. Ushers were Gary Weeks and Patrick Stocking, both of Larkspur.

Mt. Carmel P-TG Installation Set

Mill Valley's Mount Carmel Teachers Group will install officers Thursday at the last general meeting of the school year. Also featured at the meeting to be held at 8 p.m. at the school will be annual reports.

Paul Vogelheim will succeed James Arbios as the new president. Other officers to be installed are Eugene Fox, first vice president; Mrs. James McManus, second vice president; Mrs. Robert Hill, recording secretary; Mrs. William Nolan, financial secretary; Romolo Lavarone, treasurer; N. J. Sweeney, auditor; and Dr. Eugene Solovieff, Mrs. Robert Fair and Messrs. Edward Boessenecker, Gerald Mertens and Jack Heard, advisory board members.

Mary Aird To Wed In September Rite

Dr. and Mrs. Robert B. Aird of Mill Valley announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Emily, to Goode Paschall Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Goode P. Davis of Nashville, Tenn.

"Polly," as she is better known, was graduated from the Katharine Branson School in Ross and attended Wellesley College for two years. She was graduated from Stanford University with honors in 1962.

Her grandparents were the late Dr. and Mrs. John W. Aird of Provo, Utah, and Long Beach, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry H. Collins of Bryn Mawr, Pa.

The father of the bride-elect is professor and chairman of the Department of Neurology at the University of California Medical School. He is also director of Deep Springs College in California.

"Sandy," as the future bridegroom is known to friends, was graduated from Webb School in Claremont and attended the University of California. He served in the U.S. Marine Corps two years before his graduation from Harvard University in 1954.

His grandparents were the late Mr. and Mrs. John Overton Dickinson of Nashville, and the late Mr. and Mrs. Norman H. Davis of New York and Washington, D.C. Mr. Davis was financial advisor to President Wilson at the Versailles Peace Conference and undersecretary of State in Wilson's Cabinet. Under President Franklin D. Roosevelt he was ambassador-at-large, and during World War II was chairman of the International Red Cross.

The young people are at present working in Washington. "Polly" is doing research and writing for a national institute of health project on "Genera of Recent Mammals of the World." "Sandy" is a writer on the editorial staff of the National Geographic Society.

The wedding will take place in the Community Church in Mill Valley on Sept. 7.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL

The Most Exciting Month Of The Year Is Here Again

We're not quite sure why this is true. But somehow June is a month starting something different, even more so than January which starts a new year or century.

Perhaps it goes back to pre-adult days with June as the defactor start of summer, of vacation, of the end of school, of long days, of camping, fishing and loafing, of a lifting of responsibilities.

Perhaps it goes back to romance days with June and moon and spoon mixed in a hazy film of wedding gowns, beautiful girls, and orange blossoms, and slow dances to a big band.

Perhaps it doesn't go back very far at all, only to realization that vacations are really here, that it's time to plan for those two or three weeks away from the office, that others already have left on their motor tour, their trip to the mountains, up the Redwood highway, or to Europe or the Orient.

Perhaps its getting out the garden furniture, putting the covers on the campaign chairs which have stood like skeletons all winter, trimming off the dead rose buds so as to make room for more blooms.

Perhaps its the call of the fairway or the sail boat or the open road. The horse trails on the mountain are beautiful and the green grass along its slopes is only starting to dry brown, with spectacular wildflowers coloring corners, spots or whole hillsides.

Perhaps its because the ocean's so blue against the fog bank on the horizon and the sand is so white, or brown, or sandy, and the waves smash against the rugged rocks so much more lightly than they did in the turbulent winter just passed.

Here it is June again. It's just as exciting, individual and intriguing as it ever was.

Only one thing seems to have changed. June comes so much earlier than it used to and comes so much more often. But that must be life.

Bouquets And Brickbats

BRICKBATS to all those careless drivers who are making this the worst Memorial Day weekend on record for traffic fatalities. Don't you be one of them.

A BIG BOUQUET to San Anselmo Fire Chief Nello E. Marcucci, who retires at the end of this month after 33 years as fire chief and 46 years as a fireman. Things just won't seem the same.

BOUQUETS — bridal we hope — to those 26 lovely young subdebs who appeared on our pages this week and not one of them was wearing one of those ghastly, bouffant hair styles.

BRICKBATS to youths who pelt cars with eggs, firecrackers, water bombs or other items. They seem to forget that while harmless in themselves the items may cause a driver to lose control of his car and result in a serious accident.

BRICKBATS to motorists who like the country scenery so much they stop and take some of it home. It's against the law, several laws, to dig up ferns, plants, trees or other greenery along the roadsides, in state parks, or from private property without permission.

A BOUQUET to what the PG&E calls "the trend" to underground power lines and away from wooden utility poles. It's about time!

By CHAPIN A. DAY

'CHIP' DAY

Quietly, and without fanfare, item 429 of the State Budget has been amended in committee and the flood control problems of Tamalpais Valley and Coyote Creek-Richardson Bay may well be on their way to being solved. The amendment is a state allocation of $500,000 for the project. It was inserted by Marin Senator John F. McCarthy in hearings before a Senate finance subcommittee. It is now a definite part of the budget.

What the sum would do would be to release a like sum from the federal government to construct the Coyote Creek Flood Control Project. That project, you may recall, has been bogged down in a morass of finances for years.

The state's $500,000 would be for acquisition of lands, easements and rights of way. Acquisition of these have held up the project because first a flood control district and then the county was unable or unwilling to foot the bill for the work.

The State Division of Water Resources argued in subcommittee hearing that $450,000 would be enough to do the job. But McCarthy was adamant and successfully held out for the whole half million.

The Army Corps of Engineers already has money available in its Small Flood Control Project fund to do the construction work. Because the construction cost will be less than a million dollars, engineers set this cost at $517,000, no further approval of Congress will be required. The major part of the work will be improvement of the drainage of Coyote Creek and out into the tidal areas of Richardson Bay.

The State Department of Water Resources is scheduled to receive a report shortly from the Corps of Engineers as to details of the project. Then, unless the state budget is changed again before the governor signs it, work could get under way almost at once.

FIRST DISTRICT Rep. Don Clausen flew into the area Memorial Day with his wife to attend the wedding of Jo Anne Misner of San Anselmo and Edward Wuelfing of Oakland in St. Anselmo's Church. Jo Anne is the daughter of Marin GOP County Central Committee Chairman Gerald Misner and Mrs. Misner.

There's another reason for the brief visit, though. Today in Santa Rosa, the executive committee of the Republican First District Committee is gathering in Las Palmas Hotel to hear a report from Don, discuss what he's been doing back in Washington and plan how to keep him there.

AN INTEGRATION NOTE of Note: Beginning this week the Montgomery, Ala., Advertiser-Journal is carrying news of interest to Negroes in all editions. Previously the newspaper, which publishes in both mornings and evenings, had four different papers with the news of Negroes in only two. THREE MINUTES A DAY

KITTEN STAYS OUT ON LIMB

A determined kitten refused for 5 days to budge from the limb of an 85-foot tree.

The 8-month-old pet of a child in Gillette, N.J., stayed perched high up on the limb day and night. It eluded all attempts of the local fire department, two humane societies and numerous neighbors to bring her down.

Finally, a tree company salesman, who hadn't climbed a tree in 5 years, shinnied up the trunk. When he got within a few feet of the kitten, he snared her and then brought her safely down.

You, too, may succeed where others fail to solve problems if you show a little daring that is tempered by good judgment and common sense.

Despite inexperience and lack of ability, there are countless constructive ways in which you can put to good use the resourcefulness and enterprise with which God has equipped you.

Develop your capacity for prudent daring in behalf of others and you will accomplish much good.

"Take courage and be stout-hearted, all you who hope in the Lord."

(Psalm 30:25)

Help me, O Holy Spirit, to know the difference between daring and recklessness.

What Enrollments In Counties?

EDITOR,
Independent-Journal:

I read with interest Chapin Day's article on school costs in the May 28 I-J.

What figures are available comparing expenditures per pupil in Marin County with the other counties mentioned by Day? This seems to me to be the most fair basis for comparison, but nowhere in his article was there any mention of school enrollment figures for any of the counties.

(NOTE: State Department of Education figures show for counties mentioned by Day, these enrollments all grades, kindergarten through junior college as of Oct. 31, 1962: Marin, 36,883; Alameda, 205,696; San Francisco, 97,880; Sonoma, 38,499; Santa Barbara, 50,579; Tulare, 44,885; Stanislaus, 44,365.)

Citizenship Not A Frill Course

Independent-Journal:

In reference to article "Assembly Votes End To 'Frill Courses'" lower left, front page, Wednesday, May 22.

CITIZENS—WAKE UP!!

Who is this Charles B. Garrigus, Democrat, Reedley? What is his background? What are his actual long-view plans for the people of California and this entire nation?

This Mr. Garrigus must have oratorical hypnotism to pull a vote of 63-3 among learned assemblymen when he involves citizenship in so-called "frills." There should be greater emphasis on citizenship in all our schools. And this character has the audacity to author legislation to delete it entirely!

Our Communist neighbors must love this man.

I strong urge the Veterans of Foreign Wars Posts and Auxiliaries and all patriotic organizations to immediately challenge this man and stop this type of proposed legislation.

65 Units, Not 30 In Apartment

EDITOR,
Independent-Journal:

Behind the American Legion Log Cabin and adjacent to Memorial Park in San Anselmo, as well as adjacent to Los Angeles Boulevard and Monterery Avenue, a developer named Robert Ryan is planning to build 65 living units (apartments) on four acres of steep, woodsy, unspoiled natural terrain.

Contrary to the 30 units you have twice now reported in the Independent-Journal, the latter instance on May 27, the actual number of families will be 65!!

All of these will use as their entrance and exit street, Sonoma Avenue, which joins Sir Francis Drake Boulevard next to the Isabel Cook School playground, causing much congestion near the school.

If these apartments are approved at the June 11 meeting of the San Anselmo City Council, they will be in an area of single family residences (R-1 zone).

The only alternative for the residents of the area seems to be to initiate a petition to change this property's zoning from R-3 (apartments) back to R-1 (single family homes) to be consistent with the surrounding area of private homes.

In writing this it is hoped that more residents of the area will (1) become aware of the numerous units planned, (2) their location, and (3) that further discussion will take place June 11 at 8 p.m., in the San Anselmo City Hall.

BENNETT CERF

The town tightwad amazed his neighbors by suddenly taking unto himself a wife. When the minister concluded the ceremony, the groom said, "I suppose there's a charge for this. What'll it be?" "Let your conscience be your guide," said the minister gallantly. "I'm usually paid in accordance with the beauty of the bride." The tightwad handed the minister a dollar. The minister gave him 75 cents change.

Their language, he says—"tree" the number two between two and four; "Jeintz" the name of the local football team; a "fit" a bottle measuring seven ounces less than a quart—"is only slightly less difficult to master than Urdu."

The original titles of four of the biggest musical hits in Broadway history, recall Dick Lewine and Alfred Simon in their definitive "Encyclopedia of Theater Music," were: 1. Lady Fair; 2. Smarty; 3. All's Fair; and 4. Away We Go! Do you know what they were called when they opened in New York?

Lawyers Who Parked In Jurors' Spaces May Ask Jury Trial

Several irate young attorneys, who were tagged for parking their cars in the San Rafael courthouse parking lot last Monday, are thinking of fighting their $1 tickets before a jury.

The lot is reserved "For Jurors Only." But the lawyers contend that on Monday they knew there were no jury trials going on in court, and therefore the entire lot was empty. They happily pulled into the lot and parked.

"It's ridiculous," says one attorney, "that the public cannot use the lot when the entire 38 spaces are going to be empty all day!"

BY THE WAY, this point should be clarified. The courthouse lot, reserved "For Jurors Only," may be used only by those who are actually picked for jury duty. Fifty or 100 jurors are called in for each trial, and if all of them tried to squeeze into the lot at once, there just isn't enough space.

So the first time you are called in, you find your own parking. If you are selected to serve on the jury, then you are entitled to park in the courthouse lot.

CAPT. SID Stinson of the sheriff's pistol team doesn't know this yet. But when he returns from the national match in Indiana, he's going to be mighty surprised to find he has signed up for a six-year hitch with the Marines.

This is how it happened:

The captain always has a lot of papers to sign as part of his administration duties in the sheriff's office. Just before he left for the national pistol match, a couple of buddies shoved a stack of papers for Stinson to sign. He signed them all. One sheet happens to be an enlistment paper.

HEARD THE story about the Indian who went into the Marin blood bank and gave a donation? After giving his pint, he was chatting with another fellow, who asked: "Are you really a full-blooded Indian?"

"Well, no," answered the Red man. "At the present moment I'm about a pint short.

HAVEN'T SEEN any in Marin stores as yet, but we understand that seat-belts are really getting "in" back East. In New York, for example, you can buy a set of genuine ocelot ($35), mink ($50), or chinchilla ($100) in a department store. Installation extra.

One firm is thinking of manufacturing seat belts out of walrus whiskers. Then the customers can honestly say, "I was saved by a whisker."

THE ALLEN-SCOTT REPORT

Pentagon Press Chief Has His Wings Clipped

By ROBERT S. ALLEN and PAUL SCOTT

WASHINGTON—Asst. Defense Secy. Arthur ("news management") Sylvester is being significantly hobbled — obviously to keep him from causing more embarrassing furores

Several months ago the inside word was that the turbulent Pentagon press chief, whose blustering justifications of official "news management" are still reverberating, was to be "kicked upstairs."

But Sylvester's close ties with the White House "Mafia" (the inner clique of long-time assistants of the President) apparently has saved him for the time being. He is remaining in the Defense Department, but in a definitely clipped role.

WHILE RETAINING his title and salary, he has been stripped of two key functions —and there may be others. Following is what has happened:

The all-important authority over censorship has been taken out of Sylvester's hands and assigned to a new agency, the directorate for classification management.

Orville Splitt, able and well-liked long-time director of the Pentagon's news office, has been made a special assistant for the express purpose of handling press inquiries regarding the explosive TFX plane contract, and to assist Defense Secretary McNamara in preparing his presentations to congressional committees on this stormy issue.

NEWSMEN HAVE ready access to Splitt. They have been told to take up "special problems," particularly relating to McNamara, with Splitt. This is a big improvement for reporters.

George MacClain, veteran civilian Air Force employee with considerable experience in the security field, is the head of the new classification management agency. He will function directly under Walter Skallerup, Jr., deputy assistant defense secretary for security policy.

Effect of this change is to take censorship policy away from Sylvester and turn it over to others.

Significantly, this major curbing of Sylvester was ordered by McNamara himself.

J. R. LOFTIS, administrative assistant to McNamara, explained it under questioning by the House appropriations subcommittee in charge of the multi-billion dollar Defense budget. The lawmakers were particularly curious about the new directorate for classification management.

Rep. George Mahon (D-Tex.), chairman, wanted to know "what benefits you expect to derive from this new unit?"

"The hope is that it will make some improvement in the selectivity of what should be classified (censored)," replied Loftis. "While there is a great deal of information that has been given out that we perhaps think should not be given out, there is also a vast amount of information that is over-classified and which should be given to the public . . . I might add that the best decisions have not always been made. There has not always been consistency."

REP. GERALD FORD (R-Mich.) pointed out that the "tendency" has been to overclassify, and in many instances classification involved opinion and not information that had anything to do with security.

Rep. Harold Ostertag (R-N.Y.) closely questioned Loftis to definitely establish that censorship policy has been taken out of Sylvester's hands.

"Are you taking it away from the office of public information?" asked Ostertag.

"We are taking the declassification function away from that office and placing it under the office that has responsibility for security policies," said Loftis.

Birmingham: What Kind Of City?

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The writer is an Associated Press staffer formerly assigned to Birmingham and was active in the city's cultural life. He now is assigned to Atlanta, but is covering the racial crisis in Birmingham.)

By JACK STILLMAN

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP)—This Deep South city, 90 years old, is steeped in a tradition that is absorbed, rather than inherited.

Its relationship to the Old South is misleading. Because of its newness, it is forever trying to find a reason for its existence.

And because it is new, it is thrashing about in an effort to become a modern city.

It finds itself in the throes of social upheaval and rioting as Negroes battle for equal opportunity.

Why does Birmingham react so violently to social upheaval? The question puzzles many.

This is a town of eight-hour-a-day laborers. But it also is a town of the finest traits of culture. Some of its citizens weep as racial strife gives their beloved city a black eye.

The city of about 340,000 population is nestled in a valley in the shadow of Red Mountain, so-named because of its red iron ore.

And Red Mountain, the spouse of the city, remains as a geographical barrier to progress. Generally speaking, culture moved over the mountain. The working masses remained in the valley.

In 1873, the little village of Elyton came into being because two railroad lines crossed. This was the beginning of Birmingham.

The only reason for Birmingham in the first place was because coal, iron and limestone—the principal raw products of pig iron—were all within wagon distance of the steel mills built by the Tennessee Coal and Iron Co., which eventually became a subsidiary of U.S. Steel Corp.

Since then, the only major industry to employ a greater number of persons here has been Hayes International Corp., a war baby born in World War II.

Iron and steel still dominate. There are many smaller plants, but no large manufacturing plants to use the raw products upon which the city was founded, except for the cast iron pipe industry.

Tennessee Coal and Iron normally employs between about 20,000 and 22,000. Peak employment during World War II was about 30,000.

There was no particular reason for the railroads to cross here in 1873. The crossing could have been 40 miles in either direction but Birmingham would have become a city anyway, because of Red Mountain and its iron ore.

Coal is found in surrounding valleys, and limestone is almost as freely distributed throughout th area.

Although the city proper has about 340,000 population—including 38.5 per cent Negro—there are more than 600,000 in the metropolitan area.

And when the late afternoon rush is over, and the great masses who live on the other side of Red Mountain have gone home, Birmingham becomes almost as quiet as any small town.

There is little night life, and until a year ago it was against the law to serve liquor and to dance at the same place.

A prominent businessman said, "People here have an inferiority complex. They pursue something negative rather than adopt a positive attitude."

The cultural background of the city includes several amateur theater groups, an outstanding art museum, a fine symphony orchestra. But culture doesn't sink down to the core of the people.

It leaves Birmingham a less polished city than most others its size. It is an area where the plantation abuts the mining town.

WAR OF NERVES FOUGHT IN PORTUGUESE ANGOLA

By PETER KNOX

CARMONA, Angola (UPI) — This town still lives on its nerves. It is the front line in Portugal's fight to stay put in Angola.

When anti-Portuguese natives rose in bloody revolt two years ago (2,000 Europeans were hacked to death), Carmona was at the heart of the military crisis.

Today, it literally is the nerve center—the number of chain smokers appears abnormally high — of what Gov. Rebocho Vaz calls "The battle of the peace.

With a population of about 2,000 whites surrounded by 40,000 blacks, Carmona is the capital of the rich coffee growing district of Uige in North Angola that stretches up to the hostile ex-Belgian Congo frontier.

The revolt has been brought under control by Portuguese troops and a tough corp of local volunteers. Rebellious natives, referred to here as "terrorits" because of the slayings of Europeans and loyal blacks on isolated farms in March, 1961, are now confined largely to rough bush areas.

Governor General of Angola Gen. Silvino Silverio Marques and Rebocho Vaz have just completed a week's tour of the Uige area, passing only lightly protected through areas that were once hotbeds of revolt.

Vaz said that 80 per cent of the Uige area is now freed from terrorism. The white population had returned to the farms in most areas, he said, and the natives seemed anxious to work and cooperate with the Portuguese.

"After months in the bush with poor food, inadequate clothing and improper medical care they do not want the terrorists to return," he said. "I am convinced that terrorism will not recur unless it is instigated from outside."

Vaz did not, however, hide the importance of securing the peace. He said that the future of Angola was "in play" in the north and outlined his hopes for a tremendous expansion of the area both agriculturally and industrially.

He referred to a speech he made recently in which he said "we are all certain that the only way to consolidate the hard won peace will be to achieve for everyone, whites, blacks and half castes, a big improvement in their living standards.

"It is essential to win the peace in Angola through the rapid victory of peace in Uige.

In this connection, a big native resettlement program has begun which will create 150 new villages with hospitals, schools and permanent homes.

"Given four or five years, we will bring about an evolution as never seen in Africa," Vaz said.

But the problem is money. As one official here said: "Courage is high, but cash is low." Huge military expenses are one of the reasons. And the outbreak of terrorism also delayed expansion.

When the terrorism struck, Carmona was guarded by only 22 troops, 18 of them colored. Eight times between March and May, 1961, assaults were made on the town but repulsed by the hastily assembled civilian defense corps using hunting rifles and antiquated pistols.

Finally, troops arrived from Portugal and tensian slackened. But the scars of race relations were slow to heal. Black and white look at one another more carefully here than in South Angola.

There, the Portuguese have mingled for hundreds of years with the native population. Multi-racialism is the answer the Portuguese come up with when they are attacked in the United Nations for refusing to grand independence to their African territories — Angola, Mozambique and Guinea — or accused of "oppressing" the African people.

The Portuguese say not only that races can live together, but must learn to live together if Africa is not to be doomed.

Elsewhere in South West Africa, in Angola's capital of Luanda, white, blacks and half-castes mingled freely. When this cautious correspondent asked on arrival there if it was safe to walk out alone at night he was told he could do so freely "and you will be safer than in New York."

A city of 350,000 inhabitants of whom about one quarter are of European origin, Luanda has an air of Portuguese permanence. If it could be picked up and set down in Portugal itself or in Brazil, it would fit neatly into the background.

The city, naturally, has its African characteristics. The color of the people in the streets runs through every shade from pitch black to pure white. In the main bars the crowds are, perhaps, predominantly white, but colored men can be seen seated and being served by white waiters. There ar no "white only" signs.

Many people, including Governor Vaz, believe the future of Angola will be decided if Portugal can push through a crash development program. It is hoped the natives will see this as their best chance of prosperity.

WAR OF NERVES — This in Angola where about 2,000 Europeans were slain by anti-Portuguese natives during the March, 1961, revolt.

THIS WEEK In The World

Anxiety Mounts On Racial Problem

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Mounting anxiety over the racial problem was evident in Washington this week. Administration leaders moved to assert leadership in the tension roiling Southern cities and at least one Northern metropolis.

Justice Department officials and Kennedy aides worked overtime drafting stronger civil rights legislation, probably for presentation to the Congress next week.

One measure reportedly would capitalize on the government's power over interstate commerce to prohibit discrimination in business establishments selling products that cross state lines.

Another bill, designed to speed up school segregation, would empower the attorney general to initiate suits on behalf of Negroes, and would encourage communities to adopt segregation plans with federal help.

At a Washington luncheon attended by nine Democratic governors, President John F. Kennedy urged the state executives to take the lead in assuring equal rights and opportunities to all persons exclusive of race.

On the same day, Wednesday, the president called about 100 managers and owners of variety store, theater, hotel and drugstore chains to a White House conference this coming week.

In a Memorial Day address at a Gettysburg, Pa., Civil War battlefield, Vice President Lyndon Johnson posed the problem thus: "In this hour, it is not our respective races which are at stake, it is our nation."

Meanwhile, the determination of Negro leaders to push for equal rights with or without federal backing was evident as demonstrations erupted in Jackson, Miss., Tallahassee, Fla., and Philadelphia. Violence and many arrests attended the protests.

Integration leaders voiced confidence that the move for equal rights had become an inexorable tide. James Farmer, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality, predicted that segregation in public places would be gone within two or three years except "in a few hard-core southern areas."

"I think we're on the threshold of a full-fledged revolt that will bring down the walls of segregation," he said.

The Supreme Court warned the City of Birmingham, Ala., and implicity, all of the south, that its 1954 school desegregation decision "did not countenance indefinite delay" in effecting school integration.

Also in the high court, Alabama's segregationist Gov. George Wallace lost his challenge of the administration's right to keep troops within reach of the uneasy City of Birmingham.

Around The World Around The Week

Disarmament—Thirty-four U.S. senators advanced a resolution suggesting a limited nuclear ban with the Russians, but administration leaders noted that the Soviets had vetoed similar proposals. Secretary of State Dean Rusk said the Russians were showing no interest in a ban that might also be acceptable to Washington

Debt—The president signed a bill raising the national debt limit to 307 billion dollars immediately and to 309 billion on July 1, barely staying abreast of federal obligations. A further rise will be necessary after July 1.

Mental Health—The Senate passed the administration's 840-million-dollar mental health bill by a vote of 72 to 1. The measure, which now goes to the House, would help finance a system of community mental hospitals.

Science Fiction Is Rapidly Starting To Turn Into Fact

By JEFFERSON GRIGSBY

DENVER (UPI)—The first man to set foot on Mars may not find any BEM. But he probably would consider them the least of his problems anyway.

BEM is science fiction writer's shorthand for bug-eyed monsters, who used to inhabit the red planet back in the tranquil days before fiction started turning into fact.

Fantasy is becoming possibility so rapidly, in fact, that a group of scientists, engineers and government officials, led by Air Force Secretary Eugene M. Zuckert, will meet here next week to discuss a subject the science-fiction writers used to consider their private domain—the exploration of Mars.

Dr. George Morgenthaler of Denver, the symposium's general program chairman says the fantastically costly feat could be achieved as early as the middle 1970s.

One of the features of the symposium's closing sessions will be an attempt by participants to set this date as closely as possible.

The symposium on the exploration of Mars is to be presented by the American Astronautical Society and cosponsored by the National Aeronautics and space administration and several other technical societies.

The problems before them are staggering:

A round trip to Mars would cover about 70 million miles under the best circumstances, and the planet is close enough to earth only once every 15 to 17 years to permit this.

It would take more than a year to accomplish such a journey, using currently envisioned chemical-powered rockets.

It would cost a sum conservatively estimated in the tens of billions of dollars.

Before the Mars spaceship could even start its trip, its parts would have to be rocketed separately into earth orbit and assembled in space. This could require from seven to 15 separate rocket launchings.

When assembled, the Mars spaceship could weigh two million pounds.

Mars is the most "earth-like" of the planets. Its rotation on its axis is about half an hour longer than an earth day. Its temperatures range from about 85 degrees above zero to about 158 below. It apparently has Polar icecaps like earths. It has an atmosphere, made up probably of a lot of nitrogen and a little water vapor and carbon dioxide.

Every two years the Earth comes between Mars and the Sun. At such times Mars may be from 34.6 million miles to 61 million miles from earth. Mars will be less than 35 million miles away on Aug. 10, 1971, and will not be that close again until the 1980s.

One of the plans for a manned Mars trip now under consideration involves shooting the components into earth orbit, assembling them by rendezvous, making the journey to Mars, and going into orbit around the planet.

Then a smaller exploration ship would be detached, to land on Mars, or possibly one of its tiny moons, Phobos and Demios, where a base camp could be established for the trip to Mars itself.

After the explorers finished their work on the planet, they would return in their small ship to the mother craft, which would leave the Mars orbit, return to earth, and land.

Such a trip, from earth orbit to Mars and back to earth, would take 420 days under this plan, including 40 days in Mars orbit or on the planet itself.

STATE SLOWS UP CAMP FACILITIES

By EDWIN S. CAPPS

SACRAMENTO (CNS)—One of the reasons there is a shortage of campground facilities in California — where thousands are turned away each season —may be a tough attitude of certain state agencies on private developers of such facilities.

Only recently, it was found that facilities to be provided by the state at Frenchman Reservoir in eastern Plumas County, at a cost of about $200,000, were non-existent when some 3,500 persons showed up for the May 4 opening of trout season.

Since then, the division of architecture has opened bids for site development, including clearing and grading and development of a water system. But fishermen, campers and families using the area this year probably will find few facilities available.

Long after the money was appropriated for the Frenchman development, the Southern California Edison Co. announced it would make some recreational development at Shaver Lake, a reservoir 50 miles east of Fresno. The company said it planned to develop 100 sites for camping.

However, now the company has found it must meet requirements of the State Division of Housing—requirements which do not apply to the State Division of Beaches and Parks, nor to the U.S. Forest Service.

The firm had planned to have running water at each trailer pad, as well as electricity. Water also was to be provided at the other camp sites, as well as toilet facilities.

Now the State Division of Housing has informed the company its proposed installation does not meet standards. While the company's plans exceed the division standards as far as water and electricity are concerned, the division requires that a firm put in a full sewer line, with a hookup at each trailer site.

As a result, the company no longer is certain whether facilities at its own lake, for public use, will be feasible.

HOW TO PLAY WINNING BRIDGE

Sorry, But You Must Learn All Finesses Are Not Good

"One of these days we're going to come after you," writes the Finesse Lovers Assn. "You never have a kind word to say for a finesse, and we're not going to take it lying down. What kind of flowers do you like"

Opening lead — ♠ J

It's not that anybody scares me, but some of my best friends are finesses.

BEST PLAY

Just to show how liberal I am, here's a hand in which a finesse is clearly the best play.

South ruffs the first spade, draws a round of trumps, and goes after the diamonds. Please don't look at the East-West cards. How should declarer play the suit?

The actual declarer took the three top diamonds, discovering too late that the jack was not going to drop. He eventually fell back on the heart finesse but lost two heart tricks.

FATAL FINESSE

The heart finesse was fatal, and here we are again saying harsh things about finesses. Don't shoot, boys, the kind words are on their way.

The diamond finesse was the key to success. After drawing a round of trumps, South should lead a diamond to dummy's king, ruff a spade, and cash the ace of diamonds.

Declarer then leads a diamond toward dummy. When West follows with the eight of diamonds, South should finesse with dummy's 10. This finesse guarantees the contract.

FINESSE WORKS

If the finesse works, as it does in this case, South gets a heart discard on dummy's last diamond.

If the finesse loses, East will be unable to return a club or a diamond.

East will have to return a heart up to dummy's ace-queen or a spade to give declarer a ruff-sluff. Either way South makes the rest of the tricks.

Please omit flowers.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, June 1, the 152nd day of 1963 with 213 to follow.

The moon is approaching full phase. The morning stars are Venus, Jupiter and Saturn. The evening star is Mars.

On this day in history:

In 1881, officials of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., announced that cadets would no longer be allowed to use tobacco.

In 1944, the siesta was abolished in Mexico.

A thought for the day — German Socialist Karl Marx said: "The ruling ideas of each age have ever been the ideas of its ruling class."

OBITUARIES

Jeanette Pellegrini Succumbs

Jeanette Baloud Pellegrini of rural Siskiyou County died at her sister's home in Grass Valley, Nevada County, last night after a long illness.

She was the mother of Mrs. Price Hall of Larkspur.

A native of San Francisco, Mrs. Pellegrini was the wife of Manfredo Pellegrini. Until three years ago, he owned and operated a garage in Vacaville, Solano County. On retirement, the couple moved to Siskiyou County.

Other survivors include her sister, Mrs. Jessie Edwards, and her mother, Mrs. Baloud, both of Grass Valley, and two brothers, Harold Baloud of Auburn, Placer County, and Charles Baloud of Colfax, Placer County.

Funeral services are pending in Grass Valley.

SIDNEY ZINK

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Prof. Sidney Zink, chairman of the philosophy department at San Francisco State College, died of cancer Thursday at the age of 46.

Zink taught at San Jose State College and the Universities of Chicago and Missouri before joining the faculty at San Francisco State College in 1959.

He was the author of a book, "The Concept of Ethics," and of many philosophical papers. He was secretary-treasurer of the Pacific division of the American Philosophical Assn. and a trustee of the American Society for Aesthetics.

He is survived by his wife, Marjorie; three sons, Gordon, David and Stephan; and his mother, Mrs. Mammie Zink of Long Beach.

There will be no funeral service.

W. CAMPBELL

William Campbell, 75, of 1026 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, San Anselmo, died yesterday in a San Francisco hospital after a long illness.

He was a retired street department employee for the City of San Anselmo and resident of Marin County for 40 years. Born in Scotland, he was a veteran of World War I and member of San Anselmo American Legion Post 179. He was a former member of the Cedar Rapids, Iowa Masonic Lodge.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Grace L. Campbell of San Anselmo; daughter, Mrs. Lorna Shearer of Sacramento; a son, Harry Campbell of San Anselmo and three grand children.

Funeral arrangements are pending at Chapel of the Hills, San Anselmo.

DEATHS

CAMPBELL—In San Anselmo, May 31, 1963, William Campbell, beloved husband of Grace L. Campbell, devoted father of Harry Campbell of San Anselmo and Mrs. Lorna Shearer of Sacramento. Loving cousin of Miss Isabelle and Miss Mary Campbell, both of Cedar Rapids, Iowa. Also survived by three grandchildren. A native of Scotland aged 75 years. Funeral arrangements are pending at the Chapel of the Hills, San Anselmo. (6/1)

Girl Crashes Into 2 Autos

A 17-year-old San Rafael girl was hospitalized early this morning when the car she was driving hit two parked sportscars at the corner of Brookside Drive and Berkeley Avenue in San Anselmo.

Linda Fuller, 530 D Street, today was reported in good condition at San Rafael General Hospital where she was held for observation. Officers of San Anselmo police reported the girl fled the scene on foot after the accident, and was picked up a couple blocks away.

The sportscars were both owned by John Fountain, 299 Brookside Drive. Miss Fuller was driving a car registered to Rudolph V. Hallenbarter, 343 Jewell Street, San Rafael, police said.

MARIN BAY HOME
In the NATIONAL SPOTLIGHT Again

You should see these down to earth values:

Twenty-six Foot Living Room $33,000
A fine home in the moderate price class, yet across from Peacock Gap Golf Course. The kids will romp in the tremendous level back yard, and on the hill rising gently from the patio area. Three bedrooms and two delightful baths. A 26 foot living room, all Westinghouse kitchen with ribbon-mahogany cabinets make life a pleasure for the family fortunate enough to live here. Carpeted of course. #186.

Across From Lagoon $40,000
Here is a four bedroom, two bath beauty just being completed across from Peacock Sailing Lagoon. It contains an amenity which you might not ordinarily expect in a medium priced home — a separate play room. This room is great for the children, or dad's billiard table, or mother's bridge luncheons. Master bedrooms has a walk-in closet. Carpeted of course. #17.

Elegant Spaciousness $43,500
An attractively designed coach lamp at the double entry doors creates a feeling of warmth and gracious welcome as you enter this beautiful 3 bedroom, 2 bath home. Spaciousness, is the keynote throughout. The discriminating buyer will appreciate the gold toned bath fixtures, abundant storage and the kitchen with all GE appliances. The formal dining room invites the appreciation of your guests. #187.

Sweeping Views $46,000
The wet bar in the family room forms a conversation pit and entertainment center for the executive who enjoys creating his own libations in a truly fine home. This 4 bedroom, 2½ bath residence with its sweeping views, and separate master balcony offer many advantages. The master bedroom and bath are completely separate from the other three bedrooms and bath at the other end of the home #90.

Multi-view of Lagoon and Golf Course $46,500
Spacious home with every square foot at its livable best. Multi-view affords vista across sailing lagoon and Peacock Gap Golf Course. Four bedrooms, and 2 baths with master dressing room affords the look of much more than moderate price indicates. Gulistan all wool carpeting throughout complements the Loma stone fireplace wall. #21.

Roman Tub $46,500
Step down into a sunken Roman bathtub for a truly voluptuous bubble bath. Every aspect of this magnificent 3 bedroom, 2 bath home accentuates luxury at Marin Bay. Thick carpeting and wide, wide exposed aggregate entry steps carry out this theme. You'll find the huge rear deck a maintenance-free patio from which to enjoy the view. #16.

Round Up Days

Nestled among the ageless oaks in the Macamas foothills, just 10 minutes from the old Mission in Sonoma. An ideal home for that blue ribbon gaited stock. Run a few calves, too. Ranch has a 2-bedroom older home that reflects character and charm. Many outbuildings, natural landscaping. Nearly 500 feet of paved county road frontage. Insures privacy. 16 acres included. Excellent well. Taxes only $67.50 last year. You won't believe the price: $32,500. Owner will help finance.

2 Acres, On Creek
Small Cottage

A lovely parcel of land covered with beautiful oaks and madrones. Offers tremendous amount of privacy, yet the distance is only 3 miles from Sonoma. Situated on a picturesque trout stream. Excellent well. You won't believe it but the price for all this is only $14,500.

Rome-Red Fight Shifts During Year

By Ray Moseley
United Press International

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—Events of the past year appear to have brought a great change in the battle between the Roman Catholic Church and the Communist world ruled from Moscow.

Diplomatic talks have been going on for months that could lay the basis for a broad settlement of some of the major sore spots in the great conflict.

But one thing needs to be immediately understood. Tactics and commanders may have changed in recent years in this contest. But on neither side have the weapons been sheathed.

It was the late Josef Stalin who, as has so often been quoted. Allegedly remarked sneeringly to Winston Churchill at Yalta. "How many divisions does the Pope have?"

And the Pope of whom Stalin spoke, Pius XII, yielded nothing in his campaign against the anti-Godness of Communism.

"The Church of Christ," he said, "does not dream of abandoning the terrain to its declared enemy, atheistic Communism, without a fight .This combat will be carried through to the end. But with the weapons of Christ."

Today both Pius and Stalin are gone and the chief protagonists in the Vatican-Kremlin battle are Pope John XXIII and Nikita Khrushchev. The times have changed with the men, making possible developments over the past eight months in Moscow, Warsaw, Prague, Budapest and Vatican City that indicate possibilities of some limited rapprochement.

There is some fear in the Vatican, and possibly in the Kremlin as well, that recent approaches may be misunderstood—that some people may begin to think that Catholicism and Communism are compatible. Any such mpression is mistaken.

The approaches so far have revolved around three main points: Poland's desire to have consular relations with the Vatican. Hungary's wish to get Jozef Cardinal Mindszenty out of the country, and Czechoslovakia's wish for a settlement of such problems as that posed by Prague archbishop Josef Beran, who has been in Communist confinement for the past 12 years.

How and why all this started and how it has developed is partly a matter of speculation, partly a matter of clearly defined fact.

One conclusion that can be drawn is that the Communist campaign to destroy religion in the Communist countries has failed, and the Red rulers have decided to accommodate themselves to this unpleasant reality. Three years ago the Vatican newspaper Osservatore Romano noted that even in Russia, where Bolshevism had been in control more than 40 years, one person out of two still believed in God.

Signs of a change in Communist policy toward religion appeared as far back as 1954, when the post-Stalin leadership in the Kremlin undertook a softer approach and even some tolerance, in its anti-religion activities and propaganda.

All through Pope John's reign which started in 1958, the Communists have stressed that he is "different" from Pius and allegedly more reasonable in his attitude toward Communism.

There have been differences in papal methods, obviously and inevitably, but John is no less opposed to Communism than Pius.

To some extent, the difference between the popes reflect the different situations confronting the two men. The cataclysmic advances made by Communism under Stalin and the most severe persecution suffered by the church all occurred during Pius' reign. Pope John has ruled through a more stable period, and consequently his pronouncements have been couched in less-militant terms.

There have been two significant events in John's reign that opened the way for the present Communist overtures—the Vatican Ecumenical Council and the Cuban crisis last fall.

Dutch-born Msgr. John Willebrands of the Vatican secretariat of state, who has a reputation as a trouble-shooter, was sent to Moscow almost on the eve of the council last year to invite the Russian Orthodox Church to send observers. The Khrushchev government permitted two Russian churchmen to come to Rome.

The Russian prelates apparently were assigned one task over and above observing the work of the council. That was to assess the prospects of a rapprochement with Catholicism that would help Communism in Khrushchev's campaign to acquire respectability and thus deceive the unsophisticated—a campaign some observers suggested succeeded in helping the Communists gain one million votes in the recent Italian election.

The Russians talked, listened and went home. Less than a month later, without any moves on the Vatican's part, Russia suddenly released Ukrainian Msgr. Josef Slipyi after 18 years of imprisonment and torture.

The Cuban crisis, which erupted in the middle of the Ecumenical Council, brought from Pope John several eloquent, carefully worded appeals which avoided condemnation of either side and urged both to spare the world the horrors of a nuclear war.

These appeals were praised by Khrushchev, who followed up last March by sending his son-in-law Alexei I. Adzhubei—who is both editor of Izvestia and a Kremlin trouble-shooter—on a barnstorming tour of Italy that was climaxed by an unprecedented audience with the Pope.

Both the Vatican and the Russians have been silent ever since on what was discussed at that audience. But diplomatic sources in Rome are convinced the main purpose of Adzhubei's visit was to lay the groundwork for establishment of Vatican-Kremlin relations.

Such relations would make it easier for the two sides to negotiate settlements in Eastern Europe, among other things. Present negotiations are being carried out in unorthodox, patchwork fashion.

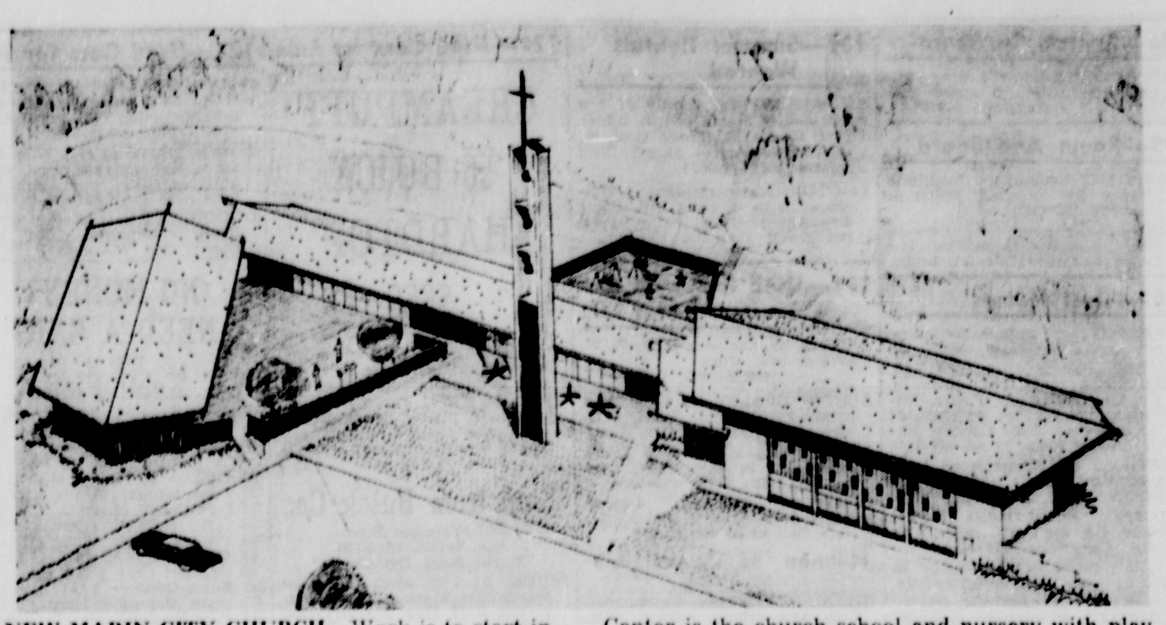
The Russians know that formal relations with the Vatican cannot be established overnight. This probably explains why the first direct approach for diplomatic relations has come from Poland, where the situation of the church is much better than in most other Communist countries.

Jerzy Zawieyski, a member of the Polish council of state, came to Rome last Nov. 20 and had a secret audience with the Pope at which he advanced the proposal for establishment of consular relations.

Since then, negotiations have moved along mostly in secret and rather slowly, hindered to some extent by continued Communist harassment of the church in Poland. Stefan Cardinal Wyszynski, the primate of Poland and one of the most imposing figures in the Catholic hierarchy, has been charged by the Vatican with handling the church's end of the negotiations and he was in Rome in late May reporting to the Pope on progress of the talks.

The Hungarian approach to the Vatican on the Mindszenty case seems to have been made through church officials in Vienna. In March this year it became known that Franziskus Cardinal Koenig, archbishop of Vienna, had been entrusted with a Vatican mission of going to Budapest and trying to persuade Mindszenty to leave his refuge in the U.S. legation there.

Koenig made the first contact in April. Since then, Msgr. Agostino Casaroli of the Vatican secretariat of state and Msgr. Opilio Rossi, papal nuncio to Austria, have been in the forefront of the negotiations.



NEW MARIN CITY CHURCH—Work is to start in September on the Village Baptist Church at Marin City. The first phase will be the sanctuary, right. Center is the church school and nursery with play yard behind and, at left, is the fellowship hall or recreational facility. A carillon is to be installed in the belfry.

Marin City Baptists Show Plans

Land is expected to be acquired this month for the Village Baptist Church which, with a tentative September groundbreaking date, may be the first church to rise in the new Marin City.

Plans are to build a $75,000 sanctuary first, according to Rev. Samuel L. Banks, pastor of a congregation of 100. Next will follow the educational facility which would include a day nursery and, last, the fellowship hall.

A drive to raise funds for construction will begin this week, Banks said. He invited persons interested in contributing to the church to send contributions to Village Baptist Church, P.O. Box 13, Marin City.

The church, to be built at Drake Avenue and Park Circle, will be of redwood and stucco and will be about 60 by 40 feet in dimension. Beneath the santuary will be classrooms. Wayne Osaki of San Francisco is architect.

The day nursery proposed would be used by people who work and wish to leave their children.

Banks said the church is the seventh in Marin which comes under the American Baptist Convention.

CHURCH MUST PUT 'TROOPS' IN FIELD

DAYTON, Ohio (AP)—Comparing the church with a military base, Dr. Reuel L. Howe says it should send out fresh "troops" and receive the tired and wounded. But it often uses all its "troops" to maintain the base and has none left over for the battle, he says.

Howe, director of the Institute for Advanced Pastoral Studies at Bloomfield Hills, Mich., told a ministers' conference:

"A lot of people think they are serving God by being ushers in a church . . . If a man receives anything in church, it ought to express itself in his work and other responsibilities, otherwise his life is phony."

New Psychiatry Echoes Christ's Views, Refutes Freudian Ideas

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

For half a century, Freudian psychiatry has tried to interpret human life in terms of the instinctive drives which man shares with the beasts.

Now a new school of psychiatry has arisen in Vienna. In a strange echo of words that Jesus spoke 2,000 years ago, it is saying that man does not live by bread alone . . . that his deepest need is not to achieve sexual fulfillment but to find an authentic meaning for his existence.

This new school of psychiatry, which takes man's spiritual nature seriously, is known as "Logotheraphy." Its founder and chief apostle is Dr. Viktor E. Frankl, professor of psychiatry at the University of Vienna, and president of the Austrian Medical Society for Psychotherapy.

A layman's introduction to Doctor Frankl's thinking is now available in the form of a paperback book entitled "Man's Search for Meaning" (Washington Square Press).

It begins with a vivid autobiographical account of Doctor Frankl's experiences as prisoner No. 119,104 in the Nazi concentration camp at Auschwitz. It was there, in the shadow of the gas ovens that his wife, father, mother and brother died, that the Viennese psychiatrist came to appreciate the philosopher Nietzsche's words: "He who has a Why to live for can bear with almost any How."

Doctor Frankl survived Auschwitz because he discovered that life always has meaning, even when it seems to be bounded on all sides by suffering.

Nor is this meaning something which man invents to kid himself along, a sort of self-constructed carrot on the stick of existence.

"If the meaning that is waiting to be fulfilled by man were really nothing more than a projection of his wishful thinking," says Doctor Frankl, "it would immediately lose its demanding and challenging character. It could not longer call man forth or summon man.

"The meaning of our existence is not invented by ourselves, but rather detected."

Since Doctor Frankl is writing a book on psychiatry rather than religion, he does not argue about what name should be applied to the Ultimate Source of the meaning which man "detects" in his existence. But his own name for it is God, a word which he uses often and unashamedly in his psychiatric texts.

He avoids any attempt to express the meaning of life in general or abstract terms.

"The meaning of life differs from man to man, from day to day and from hour to hour," he says. "What matters is not the meaning of life in general but rather the specific meaning of a person's life at a given moment . . . life ultimately means taking the responsibility to find the right answer to the very real and concrete problems which are constantly being set before us as individuals."

Doctor Frankl flatly repudiates the basic Freudism doctrine that man's main concern is to "gain pleasure and avoid pain." He contends that the real primary urge is the "will to meaning" and that it is so powerful that "man is even ready to suffer on the condition that his suffering has a meaning."

He tells of an elderly patient who was overcome with severe depression because of the death of his wife. Doctor Frankl asked him what would have happened to the wife if her husband had died first. The patient replied that it would have been "terrible" for her.

"You see," Doctor Frankl replied, "such a suffering has been spared her and it is you who have spared her this suffering, but now you have to pay for it by surviving and mourning her."

"He said no word," Doctor Frankl recalls, "but shook my hand and calmly left my office. Suffering ceases to be suffering in some way at the moment it finds a meaning, such as the meaning of a sacrifice."

Doctor Frankl also rejects vigorously the Freudian notion that human love is "a mere side effect, or sublimation, of a sex."

"Love is as primary a phenomenon as sex," he declares. "No one can become fully aware of the very essence of another human being unless he loves her. By the spiritual act of love he is enabled to see the essential traits and features in the beloved person; and even more, he sees that which is potential in him . . . by his love, the loving person enables the beloved person to make these potentialities come true."

Freud's warnings against "inhibitions" and "repression" have been cited by many years as an alibi for free indulgence of sexual appetites. But the man who now ranks as Europe's leading psychiatrist is no friend of libertines.

"Sex," says Viktor Frankl, "is sanctified as soon as—but only as long as—it is a vehicle of love."

Medicine And Religion Should Work Together

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Greater understanding is needed between men of medicine and men of religion if either group is to "see man clearly," Rev. George Christian Anderson, founder and director of the Academy of Religion and Mental Health, told a meeting here.

"One of the great tragedies of our day," he said, "is that too many of our physicians dispense tons and tons of tranquilizer drugs and refuse to sit down and attempt to understand their patients as persons."

FORMER INMATE

He Helps Felons Find New Lives

BURLINGAME (UPI)—A three-time loser became a Baptist minister Wednesday.

Larry Baulch, 36, who has done time in San Quentin three times since he was 19 years old, finished his studies at the Baptist Divinity School at Berkeley.

Baulch credits his reformation to his wife, Evelyn, whom he met at a church family night after getting out of prison, and to his teachers at the divinity school.

Baulch first went to San Quentin in 1945 for 20 months for burglary. He did 30 more months for forgery, beginning in 1951 and went back in 1957 on a bad check charge.

After getting out he met the Rev. Cecil Osborne, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Burlingame, and became interested in the halfway house program for former prisoners.

Baulch has served as an unpaid director of the Yokefellow Halfway House in San Mateo, a job he still holds. Baulch will continue this job and not seek a pulpit, he says.

The real story, says Baulch, is not himself, but "the way the church accepted me and is making it possible for me to help support my fellow prisoners."

FELLOWSHIP PRAYER FOR PENTECOST

The president of the National Council of Churches today asked member communions to pray on Pentecost tomorrow "for reconciliation and fellowship among men of different races and groups in every community."

J. Irwin Miller of Columbus, Ind., first layman ever elected to head the nation's largest religious body, urged Christians to pray for the elimination of "racism from our hearts and from our practices."

A spokesman of the National Council of Churches explained that Miller's message to the 31 major Protestant and Orthodox communions, which constitute the Council's membership, was an expression of concern for events in Birmingham, Ala., Greensboro, N.C., Nashville, Tenn., and other towns where racial discrimination is being protested.

(For more on Pentecost see page M6 in Marin Magazine.)

Faith And Order Topic For Church Women

A panel discussion of "Faith and Order" will be held Friday during the luncheon of the Board of Directors meeting of the United Church Women of Southern Marin.

The meeting will start at 10 a.m. at the Redwoods Presbyterian Church, Larkspur. Moderator will be the Rev. Lincoln Wirt of the United Church of Christ, San Rafael.

St. Paul's Sets Picnic

The annual parish picnic of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, San Rafael, will be at the Bishop's Ranch in Healdsburg tomorrow. Those attending will leave from the church after th 9 a.m. Communion service.

City Church Suffers In Suburb Move

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Middle class Episcopalians are leaving the city for the suburbs and leaving their churches behind.

The problem is considered so severe by the National Council of the Protestant Episcopal Church that it authorized $300,000 for conferences across the nation to discuss the situation.

Clergymen have conferred in New York, Chicago, San Francisco on the problem. A council spokesman said recently, "This shift to suburbia means that the middle class is leaving the inner-city area all across the country.

"The inner city is left to minority groups. The church is often left with a shell—a building and the remnants of a congregation. Older people stay in the cities, and they have less resources and more needs and demands for church services and programs."

Holy Innocents Church in San Francisco was used as an example. After a large part of its congregation moved away, it couldn't support itself.

Last year Holy Innocents was demoted from parish to mission. The property was deeded to the Diocese of California, and Bishop James A. Pike sent it a vicar, Rev. Martin Risard, and $3,000 a year for support.

As a mission, Holy Innocents began seeking ties with the neighborhood's new residents. Father Risard and four other neighborhood priests enrolled in Spanish language classes.

This attempt at a solution to the problem means new paths for Episcopalian clergymen, as explained by Archdeacon Darby Betts, in charge of mission work in the California diocese.

San Rafael Chamber Of Commerce Manager Is Also A Rugged Bronc Buster

By DON KEOWN

Week days 26-year-old Jack Phillips wears a business suit and serves as the young and efficient manager of the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce.

Weekends he dons cowboy boots, stetson and other Western attire and becomes a rodeo rider and roper.

It's an unusual combination that is all the more strange in that as a youth Phillips never lived or worked on a ranch or farm.

He got his first taste of rodeo while in college.

Phillips was born in Durant, Okla., and reared in Sioux Falls, S.D. He attended the universities of Oklahoma and South Dakota and it was at the latter that he was bitten by the rodeo bug.

At the University of South Dakota—and at many other Rocky Mountain, Midwestern and Southwestern colleges—rodeo is a major sport. On a dare from a fraternity brother Phillips entered the bareback riding in the university rodeo.

"I WAS BUCKED off so fast my head swam," he grins.

But Phillips was by no means discouraged. "I knew that everyone gets bucked off the first time," he says "and that it was just part of the thrill. I liked it."

There was no further collegiate riding for Phillips, however, as his first meet marked the close of the season. And Phillips was also winding up his studies in business administration.

While waiting for a job to open up in the business field, Phillips received an offer of summer employment with a stock contractor for the Rodeo Cowboys Assn. Phillips accepted and began making the rodeo circuit. It offered him an opportunity to resume his riding.

"The professional cowboys helped me a lot at this time," he says. "They could see that I didn't know a thing, so they taught me as much as they could."

THEN PHILLIPS began competing and his second ride in competition "was a lot better than my first."

Phillips accepted a position as manager of the Worland, Wyo., Chamber of Commerce and continued to ride, during the 14 months he was there, "in as many rodeos as I could make, although there weren't many in the area."

He leased a ranch in the Big Horn Mountains and began operating it as a dude ranch.

Looking for a more challenging chamber job, he accepted the San Rafael post eight months ago. And in California, found himself once again in a center of heavy rodeo activity.

Phillips not only rides the broncs and bulls, but he also bulldogs and ropes.

"BULLDOGGING is my weakest point," he says. "It takes a lot of strength, and then, too, I am just less experienced in it."

For roping and bulldogging the cowboys ride their own horses. Phillips owns two quarter horses, Chub and Bunny, one for roping, the other for bulldogging, which he keeps on an acre and a half at his Novato home. At least once a week he takes his horses from his place on Wilson Avenue at the end of Indian Valley Road the short distance to Wally Scott's arena where 15 head of steer are available for bulldogging and roping practice.

Sometimes he will travel greater distances for practice "since it is too hard on Wally's steers to use them oftener."

A MARINITE now for eight months, he has yet to perform for the home folk. But he gets his opportunity tomorrow when he will compete in five events in the San Rafael Kiwanis Club's annual rodeo starting at 12:30 p.m. at the Circle V Ranch at Fairfax. Then on June 16 he will take part in the Novato rodeo that highlights that city's Western Weekend celebration.

Wife Marilyn, Phillips admits, is somewhat less than enthusiastic about having her husband spend his weekends riding bucking horses and wrestling stubborn steers. But she is on hand to cheer her husband. And she has recently started to ride in the barrel races, the only rodeo event regularly open to women riders.

PHILLIPS says he has yet to chalk up that first big win over the "big name" performers. But he feels he is improving steadily. And some day soon he may surprise the stars.

He holds a Rodeo Cowboys Assn. permit which entitles him to compete in the RCA "pro" rodeos without making him ineligible for amateur events.

"My permit differs from a regular RCA card only in that it does not entitle me to association voting rights and insurance coverage," Phillips explains.

Phillips says that saddle bronc and bull riding are the most dangerous of the rodeo events — "there are more

JACK PHILLIPS RIDES AGAINST RODEO'S BEST

"Saddle bronc riding is especially hazardous because of the danger of getting hung up in the stirrups," he explains.

Phillips, who stands six feet three inches tall and weighs 200 pounds, says his size is often a disadvantage in riding. "My long legs can be a real problem, especially when I draw a small horse," he says.

"But bareback riding is still my best event," he adds.

Why has he chosen such a dangerous sport as his "hobby"?

"BECAUSE," Phillips answers, "it is so completely different from what I do during the week.

"I have participated in every major sport from football to skiing, but I have never found anything that compares in excitement and in satisfaction with rodeo."

Yes, he does plan to continue to ride.

"After all, it's the best way in the world of seeing California," he smiles. "I've been riding in towns that aren't even on the map."

And besides, there's that challenge of striving for that first big win over the greats of the rodeo circuit.

WOULD HE advise other young men to take up rodeo, if they are so inclined?

Phillips thinks a while on this before replying. "Yes," but only providing they have the money. It is an expensive hobby, particularly while you are learning and not winning any prize money. There are the entry fees and traveling expenses. But most of all, the cost of keeping horses."

Phillips admits that he is not yet breaking even—financially.

But there are other rewards, which he finds ample to cover the monetary deficit.

JACK PHILLIPS SEES that his two horses, Chub, seen here, and Bunny, get the best of care. Their well-being is essential to successful rodeo competition. Upkeep of the horses, Phillips says, is the major expense of his rodeo-riding avocation. (Independent-Journal photos)

THE ENTIRE PHILLIPS family poses—daughters Jackie and Laurie, wife Marilyn and head-of-the-household Jack Phillips, along with Chub the 7-year-old bay gelding. The only one missing is Bunny, Phillips' second rodeo horse.

FOUR OF THESE SIX mermaids swam in the initial fashion show-aquacade which launched Marin's Ballet Aquacade tradition back in 1946. And the other two joined them in the water the following year when ballet was added to the entertainment. Left to right were Diane Costigan, Joan McCormick, Betsy Chapman, Marcia Hodgson, Jeannie Polland and Marian Hennessey. The 1963 Ballet Aquacade is to be performed next weekend at the Ann Curtis School of Swimming.

The Birth Of A Marin Tradition

It was early summer and a group of eighth grade girls were sitting around, bored by the lack of activity.

Then the late Mrs. Reese Tucker, active in the Junior Theater of Marin movement, suggested that the girls stage a show for the entertainment of their mothers and friends.

SINCE IT was June and warm, the girls decided a combination of aquacade and fashion show would be just the thing.

And that, Betsy Chapman Purdom, one of four girls who swam in that first show which was to grow into Marin's traditional Ballet Aquacade, was how it all began back in 1946.

"We were all very shy," she remembers, "and therefore it was really a difficult project for us.

"But it all went off very beautifully — much better than we had expected."

MRS. RALSTON Hodgson, who was to direct and add ballet to the program the second year, recalls the 1946 production as "delightful, sweet and cute—purely a group of school girls doing a show. It was a very wholesome little family affair."

After a great deal of practice and lots of fun, relatives and friends totalling 100 woman guests and one uninvited male gathered at the Russell Smith pool in Ross to enjoy the entertainment.

The uninvited man, Betsy Purdom recalls, was Dr. W. Scott Polland "who hid behind a pillar in the Smith garden so that he could watch his daughter Jeannie perform."

A total of 48 girls took part in the first fashion show.

AND THE highlight of the event was reached when four of the girls came out modeling beach coats over their swim suits and suddenly threw aside the coats and surprised their audience by jumping into the pool.

They were the only swimmers that year and did several numbers in the pool.

The quartet of mermaids consisted of Betsy Chapman, now Mrs. Paul Purdom, who returned to Marin County recently from San Francisco; Diane Costigan, now Mrs. William Sloan of Sacramento; Jeannie Polland, now Mrs. Raymond Raiser residing on the Peninsula, and Marcia Hodgson, now Mrs. Allen Turja of Portland.

Three of the girls had sisters—Patty Chapman, Marian Polland and Sandy Hodgson—who succeeded them as Ballet Aquacade performers in 1955.

AND MRS. PURDOM now has a young son who, some day, she hopes, will appear in the Ballet Aquacade, which does use boy divers.

Mrs. Purdom says that "it is kind of a nice feeling to realize that you have had a part in starting something which has become a tradition."

And the tradition has won more than local acclaim.

For instance, former sportscaster Ernie Smith, who has been commentator for the show since 1948 and will do the honors again this year along with Mrs. Ralph Noah, has said: "I've been around a lot and, as far as I know, this is the only place in the United States that produces a dancing and swimming spectacle of the beauty and magnitude that is the Ballet Aquacade."

MORE THAN 300 dancers, swimmers and divers will be taking part in the 1963 Ballet Aquacade to be presented next weekend, Saturday and Sunday, at 2:30 p.m. at the Ann Curtis School of Swimming north of San Rafael.

Betsy Purdom admits that those eighth grade girls of 1946 had no idea what the results of their restless searching for something to occupy their time would be. But she will be in the audience next weekend with memories of that first show 17 years ago.

FATHER TOD W. EWALD conducts one of his Thursday evening pentecostal meetings in Holy Innocents' Episcopal Church at Corte Madera. The services, which attract some 200 worshipers, are part of the Episcopalian rector's program to revive the pentecostal spirit in his parish. Also part of that movement are the three special Feast of the Pentecost masses which he has scheduled for tomorrow morning. (Photo by Ken Molino)

A Return To The Spirit Of Pentecost

That, Says Father Tod W. Ewald, Is What He Is Attempting At His Holy Innocents' Church

By DON KEOWN

The Feast of the Pentecost was once one of Christianity's great observances, ranking with Christmas and Easter.

Yet tomorrow, in many Marin churches, the occasion will draw only casual mention, or will be ignored entirely.

To one Marin clergyman, Rev. Tod W. Ewald, the outspoken rector of Holy Innocents' Episcopal Church of Corte Madera, this is a most distressing situation. And, to him, it is also symptomatic of something which has been lost by the older "historic" churches—"a certain vitality, a zeal, a subjectivism . . ."

IN MOST such churches, the rector believes, the Pentecostal spirit has been subordinated or lost completely.

And it is significant, he feels, that "the fastest-growing churches in the world today are the comparatively-young Pentecostal churches whose members still feel free to praise God with real ardor."

"These Pentecostal outpourings were once part of the historic church," the Episcopalian minister comments, "but they were thrown out. So they proceeded to establish their own sects, and these have flourished.

"Now, once again, our own people are becoming aware of the need for this stronger power. And we cannot afford to let what occurred before happen again."

Of the Pentecostal churches, Father Ewald says: "We can learn much from them in that they can teach us how to praise God. And they can learn from us in bringing order back into their services."

HE ADDS that "there is a diversity of gifts available to us for use in worship. We have always had these gifts, but we have not been using some of them.

"It is like having a vacuum cleaner that is kept always in the closet. You have it, but you never use it. And therefore it is of no benefit to you in your housecleaning."

The Feast of the Pentecost, or Feast of the Holy Ghost, to be marked tomorrow, comes on the seventh week after Easter, marking the descent of the Holy Spirit among the apostles in Jerusalem, dramatically endowing them with "power from on high" to go forth and preach the good news of Christ.

Not all Marinites, by any means, are unaware of the event and its significance.

For instance, those of Portuguese descent traditionally celebrate the day as a major religious holiday with parades and pageantry as well as worship.

A number of Marin churches will be holding special Pentecost—or Whitsunday, as it is often called—services tomorrow including the three Marin parishes of the Assembly of God. Father Ewald's own Holy Innocents' Episcopal Church has scheduled Feast of the Pentecost masses for 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m.

AMONG THE Jews, Pentecost or Shabuoth (Feast of the Weeks) is a holiday that pre-dates the Christian observance by centuries. With them, the event originated as a "thanksgiving" celebration for the harvest.

Indeed, it was during the observance of the Jewish Pentecost that the disciples experienced the descent of the Holy Spirit, the basis for the Christian observance.

Father Ewald says that tomorrow morning's special Pentecost masses at his church are part of a program he began two years ago to encourage a return of the pentecostal spirit among his congregation.

Also a part of that program are Holy Innocents' Thursday evening pentecostal meetings which have received nationwide publicity since Bishop James A. Pike's admonition against the inducement or stressing of glossolalia or speaking with tongues by Episcopal clergymen in their public services.

FATHER EWALD denies that he was ever at variance with the bishop's instructions.

"We never over-emphasized the speaking with tongues at our Thursday evening meetings," he says. "Glossolalia and healing by the laying on of the hands (also practiced at the Thursday night services at Holy Innocents') are only two of the diversity of gifts which God has made available to us. We never lost sight of that fact."

But Father Ewald is unshaken in his conviction that the Episcopal and other historic churches must bring a greater zeal and vigor into their worship.

"We sacrifice ardor for dignity," he says. "We should be able to have both."

To support his opinions, Father Ewald points to a paper written last year by Bishop Frederick John Warnecke for the General Theological

"WHY DID SPOTS ON MY KNIT DRESS LEAVE RINGS?"

Your knit is a combination of cotton and linen. Ordinarily, you'd expect to remove spots from these natural fibers without trouble. However, the modern method of manufacture when they are made into knitted fabrics, is to use a considerable amount of water-soluble sizing. Therefore, when using water or steam to remove spots on linen and cotton combination knits, unless they are tumble dried immediately, will often leave rings. The rings may not be seen at once, but could show up only after the garment has been finished.

Synthetic knitwear also presents problems to the amateur "spotter". Even the professional must be cautious in handling them. Many are sensitive to steam and normal spot-removing solutions can cause a distinct color loss.

We must repeat that as our manufacturing prosesses and synthetic fibers become more and more complex, it is wiser to turn over the cleansing of prized garments to professional drycleaners who keep up with the newest in fabrics, finishes and methods of cleaning.

Seminary of New York City and which he has had reprinted for the Holy Innocents' Parish.

WROTE BISHOP Warnecke in part:

". . . Finally, we can learn from these groups (the Pentecostal sects) a new awareness of the Holy Spirit in the life of the Church and of the Christian. We need a numinous sense of the abiding Spirit of God with us in the Church. Typically, Pentecost is not accepted by our people as a major feast of the Christian faith . . .

"I cannot be glib about the Holy Spirit. I will not draw blueprints as these groups do of the ways in which He may come to work among us. I have never spoken with tongues.

"But I know that I need the continuing experience of His presence vividly felt and realized. So does the Church! He, as Christ promised, is the One who guides us into all truth. He gives us power and peace.

"The Prayer Book teaches that the Church is holy . . . 'because the Holy Spirit dwells in it and sanctifies its members.' In the creed we confess our faith in 'the Holy Ghost, the Lord, and Giver of life.' . . .

"THE CHURCH is under the reforming judgment of God. Redeeming, it also is being redeemed. In that process, I have faith that the Episcopal Church can honor its heritage and yet reach out to people, rich and poor, with the compassion of Jesus Christ. It can speak to them of love and judgment, of the concern and of the power of God.

"It can give our scarred and sick world hope. It can be a tool in the hands of God the Holy Spirit. This is the true Pentecostal Church filled with the holiness of God.

"God grant us that new Pentecost!"

In his paper, Bishop Warnecke had also criticized Episcopalians for a failure to speak for and involve the working and rural peoples and racial minorities, for an absence of missionary zeal, for archaic language and "fine music—that no one can sing," and for constructing unnecessarily elaborate physical plants as places of worship.

IN A PAPER which he himself wrote for his parish last month, Father Ewald declared: "As one searches the Biblical record, it is very clear that the first century Christians had a living encounter with Third Person of the Blessed Trinity. This experience gave fire and power to their message and mission.

"Many people look back upon the thrilling acts of these early Christians and pray that the Living Presence of our Lord could be felt as strongly today as then.

"In contrast to the early Church, some parishes exemplify the doctrine of the real absence. On the Feast of the Pentecost, the empty pews speak loudly of a lost power, and it almost seems that a requiem is said for the Holy Spirit instead of a jubilant celebration.

"Many parish churches have become tombs . . ."

The Thursday evening meetings attract as many as 200 worshipers "and a real pentecostal spirit, an enthusiasm, prevails."

THE LAYING ON of hands by Father Tod W. Ewald has, like glossolalia or speaking with tongues, been a part of the Thursday night meetings at Holy Innocents'. But, stresses the rector, these practices have been only two of the "diversity of gifts" which have been used in the worship services.

ONE OF THE major benefits of the movement, Father Ewald feels, is its ecumenical effects.

"In the Holy Spirit, there are no denominations," he says. "And so you will find people from all denominations, many of them from considerable distances, seated together in our congregation."

Nor, does Father Ewald believe, does this reviving of the spirit of the Pentecost pose any obstacle to his church's interest in social and moral issues.

"We feel we are in a sounder position than ever before to work for and pray for the alleviation of such conditions as the injustices that we have been hearing about in Birmingham," he says.

For those who might want to participate in "the glorious pentecostal experiences," Father Ewald suggests that tomorrow, the day of the Feast of the Pentecost, is a logical starting time.

How should they begin?

FATHER EWALD suggests: "By celebrating the Holy Communion on Pentecost as the glorious and wonderful event that it is.

"But first, some spiritual preparation must be made. And a penitent heart is the best preparation.

"One should feel this way: 'If there is more of God, I would like to have Him.'

"And one should not dictate to God as to what form he should come. Let God have a free rein. Let him come in any and many of his wondrous ways."

GRADUATION time is here again. This is a time to choose a gift for your graduating youngster. The gift for the high school graduate is especially important.

When I graduated from high school, I received a beautiful wrist watch from my brother and parents. I still have that watch, and I wear it on special occasions. It is truly a cherished item for all time.

Nowadays, you can give a gift that captures time itself, and keeps it for as long as you wish. It's like turning back the clock to the graduation day, or any other special event you have preserved. Of course, I am speaking of the tape recorder.

A compact tape recorder makes an ideal graduation gift because it is so versatile. You can capture the excitement of the graduation day itself. The graduate can take it to college and use it as one of the most successful learning tools we have. It can be used at home for learning languages, assisting with the music lessons, assisting with speech improvement. The tape recorder is also a great fun creator. Use it at parties. Use it to record your favorite radio programs. Use it to record your vacations. Use it to supplement your photo slides with sound.

The tape recorder can also be a great source of musical entertainment. You can use it instead of records to provide all types of musical enjoyment—jazz, popular, folk music, classical, opera, show tunes, etc.

The graduation gift type tape recorder should be small and compact, so that it can be carried about easily. It can be a monaural unit or a stereo unit. The monaural unit will allow the student all the flexibility he or she needs in the most compact form. The tape recorders generally come in two portable types, the transistorized battery operated types, and the AC powered types. The AC powered types are usually a little larger, but almost always will accept the larger standard reel, 7 inch, and will provide the user with richer sound. It has the disadvantage that it has to be plugged in, so it would be harder to use in the classroom.

Reasonably good tape recorders range from $79.00 and up. We are featuring a new Concord delightfully styled recorder for only $94.50. Visit us for a complete discussion and demonstration of the various tape recorders.

Novato Beauty Helps To Sell Seat Belt Idea

It's an honor for which the 1960 Novato High School graduate was selected by the San Francisco Chapter of the National Safety Council, the San Francisco Medical Society and the San Francisco junior, senior and women's chambers of commerce.

Like all such titles bestowed upon pretty girls, there has been a lot of ballyhoo and fun involved.

But there has also been a lot of work. And a most serious purpose.

"It's something I feel is really important and worthwhile," says Gail, a professional model and dancer.

Her duties have included participating in ceremonies which opened the two-month May-June campaign with San Francisco Mayor George Christopher signing a proclamation.

As part of the publicity campaign, she enjoyed a ride through San Francisco's streets in a motorized rickshaw equipped with seat belts, of course, and with Ingrid Bergman's daughter Pia Lindstrom as her companion.

And she paid a special visit to the new San Francisco nightspot, the Red Balloon, to test the Bump Buggies there which had been equipped with seat belts for the National Seat Belt months observance.

And she has made other appearances on behalf of the seat belt movement including a number of shopping centers that staged special displays.

Gail is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace P. Richardson of 1221 Vallejo Street, Novato. Her father is chief of manpower at Hamilton Air Force Base, the family having come to Novato from Hawaii three years ago.

Born in Rhode Island, Gail has two brothers, Gregg, 10, and Glen, 12.

"And I guess I could use a seat belt on the horse at times," she smiles.

As for others, Gail will be happy if they will simply install seat belts in the front seats of their automobiles---if that sensible precaution has not already been taken.

"It could save your life," she points out.

"AN AUTO SEAT BELT could save your life" is the message Gail Richardson of Novato, the Bay Area's "Miss Fasten Your Seat Belt," is attempting to put across as she demonstrates the Dynamic Research Sled used in testing seat belts. It brings occupants to a sudden halt at the end of its tracks, simulating auto crash conditions. (Photos by Bill Cogan)

Director And Producer

Win Murphy Handles Dual Chores

A PRE-SHOW PLANNING session is held by producer-director Winifred Murphy and Robert Smith, host of KQED's "What's In a Word" series. Smith is also the host for the new Channel 9 program series entitled "Weekend Vacations in California."

Women who serve as television directors and producers are few in this country, but one of that limited number makes her home in Marin.

She's Winifred Murphy, who presently resides at 280 Rose Avenue in Mill Valley, but is in the process of moving to a new home at 633 Woodbine Drive in Terra Linda.

"Win," as her associates call her, has been with the Bay Area's non-commercial station, KQED-TV, now for nine years.

CURRENTLY she is hard at work with her KQED associates and volunteer supporters of the educational station with preparations for Channel 9's ninth annual fund-raising auction, scheduled to open Tuesday and continue through this week.

But her regular duties at KQED, by far the Bay Area's largest producer of "local" programs, sees her involved each week in not one or two, but several shows. It is an immense task which, with her boundless energies, she takes in stride.

The best-known program she produces is "Kaleidoscope," an interview show with James Day, KQED's general manager, as host. "Kaleidoscope" is Channel 9's longest-running show having been on the air since 1954.

The usual TV interview show shoves guest and interviewer together in front of a camera, and they start talking. Not so with Win's program.

EVERY GUEST is researched thoroughly, to the extent that the late Eleanor Roosevelt, when she was a guest on the program, paid a high compliment to Jim Day when she said afterward: "It is surprising to me that you were able to ask me so many questions I had never been asked before."

The list of guests on the program in the past nine years reads like an excerpt from "Who's Who," including such names as Yeduhi Menuhin, Aldous Huxley, Erich Fromm, Louis Mumford, Clifton Fadiman, Shelley Berman, Jonathan Winters, James Mason, George Shearing, Mahalia Jackson, Tony Martin, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Joe E. Brown, Ann Baxter, Eddie Albert, Bob Newhart and Ella Fitzgerald.

Through the years, Win has produced and directed every conceivable kind of show—modern and classical music, foreign language, space science, modern dance, speed reading, panel discussion, etc.

A PROGRAM called "Japanese Brush Painting" with T. Mikami became a highly-popular educational network program viewed in over 70 TV areas and won a coveted Ohio State University award as an outstanding network cultural program.

Win originally went to work for KQED as a secretary. It came about through her brother, Rich Smalley, an engineer at radio station KSFO, who had advised her that the way to get a job in broadcasting was to learn shorthand and typing.

After two years of secretarial training at San Francisco City College she could take shorthand at 170 words and type 95 words a minute, an accomplishment that radio station KJBS found highly useful for a while.

But Win felt the "glamor" of radio was wearing thin and determined to get a job in television.

She confounded her family by quitting her job to return to school—this time San Francisco State College, where she majored in television while working her way through by using her secretarial skills.

IT WASN'T all work. Her sorority kept her busy, including running for queen at San Francisco State. She came in second—twice.

When San Francisco News columnist Paul Speegle became head of the radio-TV department, he hired her as his part-time secretary, which gave her valuable experience for what was to come.

KQED was just going on the air in June, 1954, when Win arrived fresh from her second round of college. With eight people on the staff, she was secretary to everybody.

When she opened her mouth to make a meek suggestion, she recalls, she was told to follow through with it. After making a few suggestions about guests for "Kaleidoscope," she became production assistant, later producer-secretary and finally producer-director.

SHE SAYS that, of the many radio-TV students in college, "I was one who had no desire to be a director or producer, and I'm one of the very few who ended up being just that. Most of them with burning ambition are now shoe or insurance salesmen."

Win was married less than a year ago to Owen Murphy, who is assistant vice president of the Redwood National Bank of San Rafael. Now preparing to settle in their new Terra Linda home, they are looking forward to relaxed Marin living—but not until the KQED auction is over.

Viewers will be able to see Win in action on KQED during the auction. She says that's the only time she ever goes on camera.

"I prefer to push other people into the frightening position of looking into that thing and remaining calm."

BUT SHE admits the auction gives her a chance to ham-it-up. "It's such a casual free-for-all, with the whole staff pitching in, doing every add-ball job, modeling, paper work, performing, and eventually tearing their hair out. It's a ball—a five-day circus unlike anything any other television station has ever done."

The 1963 auction will begin at 3 p.m. on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday and will continue until midnight.

Although on Saturdays KQED is not usually on the air, Channel 9 will put in a long day next Saturday. The auctioneering will begin at 2 p.m. and will continue until the wee hours of the morning Sunday "when the very last article has been sold."

Business firms throughout the Bay Area have donated a warehouse full of items to be sold, and celebrities will join the regular KQED staff to serve as auctioneers.

Win Murphy sums up her nine years with KQED this way: "It gives a producer-director the kind of training he (or she!) can't get anywhere else—because you move from subject to subject, doing researchc, and learning. It's like a post-graduate course in liberal arts."

STATION MANAGER Jim Day of KQED-TV and Winifred (Win) Murphy go over a script for the "Kaleidoscope" show, seen Mondays at 8:30 p.m. on Channel 9. He hosts and she produces the popular interview program.

Moffitt Mansion: A Landmark That Crossed The Bay

Fine Old Pacific Heights Home Now Sits Proudly In Belvedere

By DIANE BRAMMAN

It's a "newcomer" to Marin, and yet it is unquestionably a "landmark."

And it's a "native" and "long-time" resident of San Francisco, yet it seems perfectly at home in its new locale in Belvedere.

We're speaking of the historic Moffitt Mansion which last summer moved across the Bay to a new home in Marin.

IT WAS Norman Gilroy, a Larkspur resident who is qualified as an architect in his native Britain and is an associate of the Royal Institute of British Architects, who embarked upon the project last June, determined to preserve one of San Francisco's finest turn-of-the-century mansions by transplanting it from Pacific Heights to a new environment on Belvedere's beautiful shoreline.

Although he has a flourishing practice in the El Paseo in Mill Valley which produces strinkingly avant garde designs for new buildings of many kinds, Gilroy has nevertheless also been formulating an ambitious plan to preserve Bay Area architectural masterpieces built in the early 1900s and threatened by extinction by urban development.

"These old buildings," he wrote, "are fine examples of a period that gave birth to a brilliant era of architecture. If they are destroyed, we will lose much of our area's heritage and history. Even buildings which have outgrown their usefullness where they now stand can continue their valuable existence if moved to another location. Modern moving technology and architectural understanding can make this kind of a venture economically possible and even profitable."

THE MOFFITT Mansion's history parallels the history of San Francisco itself.

The land on which the house was built was once a part of the original Western Addition. Its first recorded "owner" was a 49er named Milton Nelson who claimed squatter's rights on 125 acres in this area. He sold it all in 1851 for $1,000.

By 1900, the 125 acres had been split up and sold in various combinations no less than 268 times. Its best-known owner and resident was Francis Bret Harte, the Gold Rush author, who owned a part of it for two months in 1868 and later sold it for $500 to a friend.

Dr. Herbert C. Moffitt, regent of the University of California Medical School and a physician of renown, bought the lot at 1818 Broadway in 1899. Part of the present house was built in 1904 for the doctor by William Knowles.

However, the complete house is better known today to students of architecture as a "Polk House" because of the radical remodeling and enlarging done in 1914 by the famed California architect Willis Polk.

THE MOFFITT MANSION was a landmark in San Francisco's Pacific Heights District for many years. Originally built in the early 1900s, it was enlarged and remodeled under the direction of architect Willis Polk in 1914. Then in 1962, to make way for a new apartment building, it was moved from its 1818 Broadway, San Francisco, site 15 miles by land and sea to a new home in Belvedere in Marin County.

POLK BECAME famous as the man who helped build the Ferry Building, but his many other buildings include the "glass curtain" Hallidie Building, train depots, churches, the Mills Building, the Spreckels Estate, the Crocker Building, dozens of private residences and much of the Panama-Pacific Exposition of 1915.

Polk was the first prominent San Franciscan to suggest that the Palace of Fine Arts be rebuilt of permanent materials as a war memorial.

There are several residences on Belvedere Island and in other parts of Marin County still very much in use which were designed and built by the "master builder," Willis Polk.

Polk was commissioned to enlarge the Moffitt Mansion and he started by adding the huge library, necessary to house the doctor's growing collection of medical books.

POLK'S ORIGINAL specifications called for such Victorian "extras" as cement design work "modeled in clay by skilled modelers," marble mantles and hearths, stained glass windows, and meticulously-prepared scrolling and design work, all done by hand.

The indoor-outdoor balcony was quite an innovation for that period and was as ideally suited to the new waterfront Belvedere setting as it had been to the Pacific Heights of 1914.

Mrs. Alice Trapnell, Dr. Moffitt's daughter and now a San Francisco apartment-dweller, was born and raised in the house and she recalls many gay parties which were held in the huge library. She remembers too, her mother coming home from the opera on the night of the earthquake and fire, and wrapping young Alice in her chinchilla cape as she herded the family outside to watch the burning city.

Her parents celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary in that library.

THE MOFFIT Mansion was just one of the many of the fine residences threatened with extinction by the rolling tide of redevelopment which is changing the face of San Francisco. But it offered Gilroy a splendid opportunity for a proving venture to test every theoretical and practical aspect of his idea while rescuing one of San Francisco's fine old residences in the process.

The house was purchased by Gilroy and a group of financiers lead by realtor William Johnstone and William Slater III of Belvedere.

Then began a long period of preparation for relocation during which the structure was literally sliced into two parts with a chain saw and loaded onto huge dollies. In the dark hours of June 23, 1962, the two sections were rolled onto Broadway and hauled down the precipitous hill of Franklin Street, onto Bay Street and the Marina Green.

Wire crews worked feverishly to loop and drop high voltage wires and cut Municipal Railroad trolley bus wires so the gargantuan sections, each weighing close to 100 tons, could move past them.

A DRAMATIC moment came at 2 o'clock in the morning when the half-inch steel plate box beam of the huge front dolly snapped in two on the steep grade at the top of Franklin Street. Workmen scattered in all directions, having "heard her groan." Two hours of steady work were needed to jack the front bearing onto a bull wagon ready to complete the journey to the Marina.

Several days later, when the tide conditions were right, the sections were loaded onto a huge barge and transported across the Bay to Marin County.

After further days of preparatory work the huge sections were unloaded and final construction and restoration phases were begun. This took three months and during this time arrangements were made with Bay Area American Institute of Decorators members to carry on the restoration to its logical conclusion by having the rooms decorated and furnished. The owners of the mansion invited guests to a "tour" in December to benefit the Peter Pan Chapter of Children's Home Society.

NOW COMPLETED and ready for occupancy, the mansion stands on West Shore Road in Belvedere facing a panoramic view of Richardson Bay, Mount Tamalpais and Sausalito.

Its design intimately reflects the sense of space and meticulous detail so typical of the days gone by.

The visitor enters through the original wrought iron gates now adapted to the new location, and walks up the path to the fine decorative iron and glass front door, which was cast in tiny pieces and assembled by a blacksmith without a single bolted or welded connection.

The spacious central entry hall contains the fine winding staircase to the upper floors and gives access by a short flight of stairs to the huge drawing room originally conceived as the library whose walls were once completely lined with Dr. Moffitt's collection of medical books. The huge 30-foot-by-40-foot room

The Landmark That Moved

Moffitt Mansion Is Perfectly At Home In Its New Site On Belvedere Shore

with its 14-foot high ceiling was delicately decorated with slender wood pilasters between the built-in book shelves which are fine examples of the effects made in the early 1900s by the precision of the machine age upon classical detailing, a subject of particular interest to Polk.

THE ROOM is graced by a beautiful crystal chandelier from the collection of Jack Howland A.I.D. of Jackson Square and the central fireplace was designed by Gilroy to replace one stolen by vandals soon after the house became unoccupied.

Over the doors, at the end of the room, are stained glass coats of arms of the schools attended by Dr. Moffitt, including those of Harvard and the University of California. Through these doors can be seen the terrace graced by a classically shaped pool surrounded by a terrace decorated with scalloped edged marble inserts. Also leading from the central entry hall is the garden room with its huge bay window and beamed ceiling, offering a secluded place in which to relax in privacy and seclusion.

The patio leading from it is tucked into a hillside which proved to be full of ancient Indian relics. Several arrow heads were found during the excavation and a full skeleton and other artifacts were dug out of the hillside some time ago.

THE DINING room and kitchen are reached through a small ante-room through massive sliding doors. All three were created in what was once the parlor, and they succeed in combining the modern living with traditional detailing.

When the mansion was moved it was without anything that would serve as a kitchen by present day standards. As was the custom around the turn of the century, the cooking was done in the basement where the Chinaman's room was located. In restoring the house it was essential that new all-electric kitchen facilities be provided and judicious use of the space in the parlor has made this possible.

The dining room has a marble fireplace large enough to add gracious warmth to formal dining. The room is approached via the ante-room in which a bar is located.

Other doors lead to an intimate hillside enclosed patio.

THE MAIN staircase leads past the door to the secret stair found during the restoration after having been walled up for many years. It's now the access to the wine cellar.

The master bedroom suite at the top of the staircase reflects lavish use of space so typical of Polk's work. The doors of this spacious and carefully proportioned room lead to the glassed-in solarium with its sweeping views of Mount Tam and Richardson Bay, from which glazed sliding doors make it possible to enjoy the view and sunshine even on days when cool winds blow off the bay.

SEPARATED dressing rooms and bathrooms are provided for the master and mistress of the house—in fact the master's dressing room with its fireplace and built-in bookshelves would make an ideal study.

Three generous sized interconnecting bedrooms are provided in addition and they are served by two adjoining bathrooms.

The attic once contained five bedrooms but had to be vacated as living space by a requirement of the zoning ordinance of the City of Belvedere. But it still provides nearly 1,500 square feet of space ideal for the most lavish model train layout imaginable.

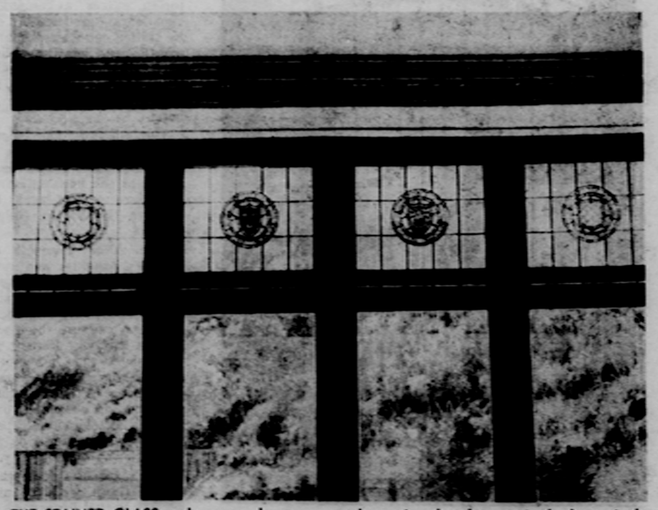
The mansion, having weathered the rigors of its transplanting extremely well, is now complete with the exception of some landscaping. Following several expert appraisals the house is being offered for sale for $160,000.

THE EXPERIMENT, it seems, was successful, as Gilroy is now embarking on the next stage of his scheme—a plan to preserve many of the historic houses threatened by the redevelopment of the Western Addition in San Francisco. For this he has been working for some time with Redevelopment Agency officials, and he hopes very soon to put his plan into action to preserve some 20 of these residences that are in the way of road widening schemes or proposed commercial redevelopments.

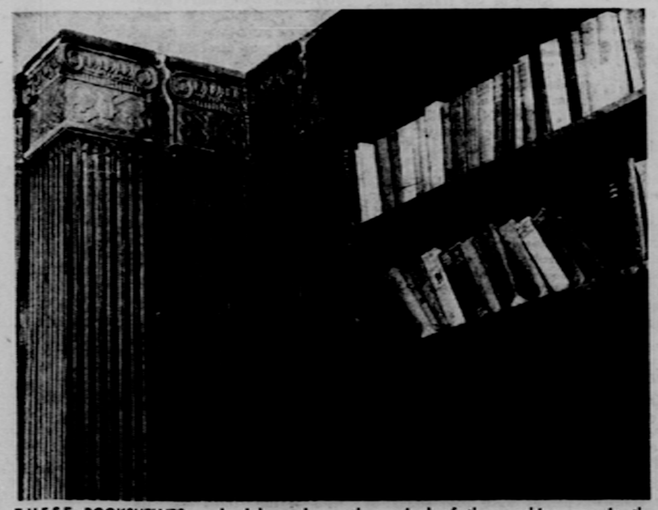
The plan is to transplant them into a new environment around a landscaped square not far from Van Ness Avenue and restore them in such a manner that they can continue to be used for the purpose for which they are designed. And at the same time to let them continue to display their lessons in the handling of space and architectural details to the architects and designers of the future.

LIKE THE KITCHEN, the dining room of the mansion was once a part of the parlor. Still a third room, an ante-room, was also made from the spacious parlor. The furnishings seen here were installed by American Institute of Decorators members when they decorated the huge home for the benefit "tour" last December. It has since been removed. But the cheerful results of the "conversion" are evident here.

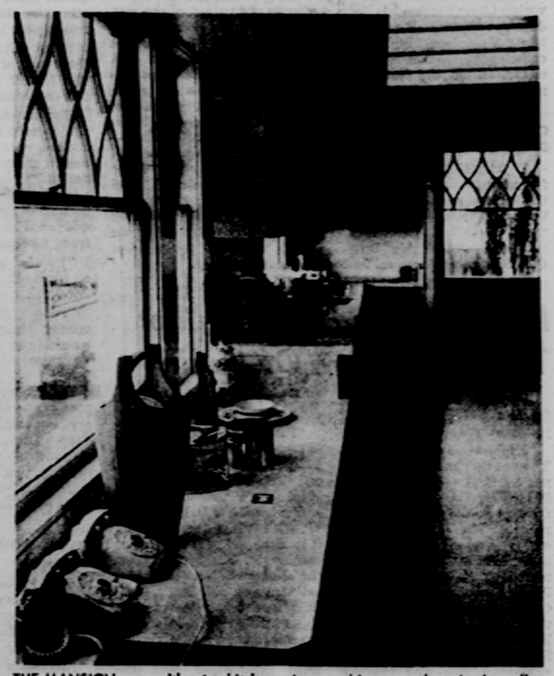
THIS HAND-CAST fireplace is found in the master's dressing room of the Moffitt Mansion. The sizable room also contains generous bookshelving and could easily be converted into a study. (Photos on these pages are by Joyce B. Wilson)



THE STAINED GLASS such as can be seen in these windows is one of the most beautiful features of the Moffitt Mansion. Complementing the glass art in the home is the equally beautiful wrought iron and carved wood which was also used in a generous measure in the distinguished old home.



THESE BOOKSHELVES and elaborately carved woodworking are fine examples of the work which came into being with the arrival of the machine age in the early 1900s. The classical detailing held a special fascination for the great architect Willis Polk who remodeled the mansion.



THE MANSION was without a kitchen, since cooking was done in the cellar by the Chinese servant in the home's San Froncisco heyday. To meet present requirements, a portion of the parlor was converted into this all-electric kitchen after the mansion was moved to Belvedere.

Strife-Torn Algeria Is Setting For British MP-Writer's Novel

By DON KEOWN

Britain's novelist-MP Maurice Edelman has come up with a performance in his "The Fratricides" that is, while hardly sensational, generally sound and satisfactory. It is a novel of considerable social depth.

The setting is Algeria in the closing stages of the bitter and bloody strife for independence from France. Then the die-hard colons of the OAS were answering Moslem FLN excesses with still more barbaric atrocities while, in France, the De Gaulle government struggled to end the terroristic conflict.

Edelman's cast of characters include persons on both sides of the struggle — and others caught in between.

It is an impressive study of how supernationalism and prejudice can destroy all that is good in the human animal. And of the terrible toll that hate extracts from haters, hated and bystanders alike.

Edelman provides a shocking picture of what life is like in a country where even women and children were deliberately slaughtered in masses —where the contention that "the ends justify the means" is an accepted policy.

Fortunately, Edelman also provides characters of compassion and courage to work for a return to sanity and dignity. And there is a touch of romance.

What seems to be lacking to make this a really fine novel is greater dimension for the characters. With but one or two exceptions, they seem to be subordinated to the plot and moral lessons which Edelman is teaching. Nevertheless, the novel must be regarded as a very good effort in a worthwhile field. It should command some thoughtful contemplation from all of us in this age when hatred is eating away at our social roots in many places other than Algeria.

THE FRATRICIDES by Maurice Edelman, Random House, 302 pages, $4.95.

STILL GLAMOROUS at 56, "the incomparable" Hildegarde is the co-author with Adele Whitely Fletcher of "Over 50 —So What!" It is part autobiography, part advice on health, grooming and poise.

Sleuths & Suspense

STUDIES IN MURDER by Edmund Lester Pearson, Doubleday and Co., 231 pages, paperback, 95 cents.

AS PART of its Dolphin series, Doubleday and Co. has reprinted Edmund Lester Pearson's "Studies in Murder," originally published in 1924 and a true crime classic of its period.

In it, Pearson, in his lively and highly individualistic style, presents his accounts of five American murder cases— the prime one the infamous and baffling Borden case. Pearson was a man much sympathetic with the police outlook and therefore pretty hard on suspects including Lizzie Borden. It is, then, all the more surprising that the fifth case proves to be one in which the suspect almost went to his death before he was not only proven innocent but his supposed victim found alive.

Much more information favoring Lizzie Borden has been developed since Pearson wrote his account, but it nevertheless still makes for interesting, if hardly unbiased, reading.

Gault's sleuth, his Brock Callahan, ex-professional football player turned private detective, becomes involved in the most direct way possible —as a suspect—when a former gridiron teammate is murdered.

The locale is southern California. Action is fast-paced. But the story seems larded with cliche characters and situations— the hoodlum, his ex-pug bodyguard, the drinking socialite wife, below-the-belt fisticuffs, the cop who dislikes private eyes, etc. — so that what emerges is acceptable but hardly exceptional.

THE DOUBLY DEAD by E. X. Ferrars, Crime Club, 186 pages, $3.50.

AN E. X. FERRARS mystery has special appeal because of the author's talent at description. "The Doubly Dead" with its rural England setting serves as a rich showcase for that ability.

Margot Dalziel, business woman and patron of the arts, vanishes from her country home under circumstances that indicate a violent end. Neighbors and relatives become embroiled in the police investigation that ensues. One little waif, Bernice Applin, is a particularly well-drawn — and tragic—figure.

The tone and style of the novel are very British, and the local color and descriptive passages generally better done than the plot or puzzle itself, which is passing but not extraordinary.

Recommended Reading For The Youngsters Of Marin

Here are some new books for the young, younger and youngest readers:

"Exploration Of Africa" by Thomas Sterling ($3.95) is the newest in American Heritage Publishing Co.'s fine Horizon Caravel Book series for young readers. The subject matter, of course, lends itself to exciting illustrations as well as text. It is the story of Mungo Park, Vasco da Gama, Rene Caille, Richard Francis Burton, John Hanning Speke, David Livingstone, Henry M. Stanley and all the other adventurous men who charted the Dark Continent. Crammed with 133 illustrations, 34 in color, the book seems certain to capture the imagination and interest of today's inquisitive youngsters.

"Patrick Visits the Zoo" by Maureen Daly (Dodd, Mead, $2.79) follows the same curious little boy and his equally curious classmates who starred in Miss Daly's earlier "Patrick Visits the Library," this time on a trip to the menagerie. There they learn the answers to such questions as "Can you ride a giraffe?" and "How much does a baby rhino weigh?" Sam Savitt provides some entertaining illustrations of the zoo's colorful inhabitants, and the book should be very pleasing —as well as informative—to the child in the 7-to-10 age bracket.

Reports From Our Reviewers

Glamor At 56

OVER 50 — SO WHAT! by Hildegard with Adele Whitely Fletcher, Doubleday and Co., 184 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

This book is two things. It is an autobiography of Hildegard, a glamorous supper club entertainer for more than 30 years. And it is also sage advice from this woman, still attractive at 56, on how to retain your vitality and looks.

Those who may not enjoy the book for one reason may still find it most worthwhile for the other.

The second phase includes tips in such fields as diet, exercises, personality, mental health, grooming, dress, hairdressing, makeup, etc. The advice, Hildegard says, comes both from her own experience and what she has picked up from famous friends.

"Youth," she says, "is not a time. It is a state of mind . . .

The autobiographical aspect of the book is of secondary importance, and is not deep or detailed. But it is a pleasant account of a colorful life that has been lived with confidence and zest, and enjoyed to the hilt.

Mayan Sayings

SAYINGS OF RAMMIKAR, Mayan Philosophy as translated by Wymar Port, Will Judy Publishing Co., 160 pages, $4. Reviewed by Richard Lyttle.

This book carries translations of 461 sayings attributed to Rammikar, a man who lived in Mayan state in the 15th century. In the accounts leading up to the actual translations Port writes of the history and research of the Mayans.

His account is full of annoying repetitions and he frequently "documents" his archeology by citing dispatches from the Associated Press. All of which shakes the reader's confidence.

Port is also one of the modern spellers, using "enuf" for enough, "filosofer" for philosopher, and "technik" for technique. Once, however, he slips into the accepted spelling of technique. All this makes one wonder what liberties he might be taking with the Mayan language in his translations.

"When a new dog greets the master, the old dog increases his affection."

A Spiritual Call

THE CROSS AND THE SWITCHBLADE by Rev. David Wilkerson with John and Elizabeth Sherrill, Bernard Geis Associates, 218 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Lee Cadwallader.

David Wilkerson of the Assemblies of God Church tells in "The Cross and the Switchblade" how he happened to leave his small town parish in Philipsburg, Pa., to bring practical and spiritual help to slum children in the metropolitan areas of Brooklyn, Chicago and Los Angeles.

In the beginning his expenses were paid solely by the contributions of his small parish, but now his Teen Challenge movement is supported by many prominent businessmen and church leaders of other faiths. Thanks to his work and the faith of his parishioners there are now three Teen Challenge Centers —in Brooklyn, Chicago and Los Angeles—and a rehabilitation farm in Pennsylvania.

John and Elizabeth Sherrill are the writers of this book. They create clear and vivid images of evil in the daylight. Even their night scenes are starkly illuminated with fluorescent skill. Their frank and lucid descriptions of young "junkies," hoodlums, and their "debs" and "dolls" have the chilling, haunting quality of murder in a kindergarten.

At first I was annoyed at Reverend Wilkerson's insistence on devoting so much space to explain why he believes he was directed in all this work by a spiritual call, and by his frequent use of the word "miracle," but in retrospect I see now that such a quarrel is unimportant.

What is important is that this is his story of what he is doing for all of us, told the way he sees and feels it. I am grateful that his achievements are great.

Gusty Volume

THE EUNUCH AND THE VIRGIN by Peter Tompkins, Clarkson N. Potter, 304 pages, $5. Reviewed by Bill Hendricks.

This is a gusty book, indeed, for most palates, dealing with castration, mutilation and enforced virginity through the ages. Thoroughly researched and written, the author even comes up with his own answers to the problems of the "third sex," its effect on criminals and the world population. But it should be kept on a high self.

MARIN POETS' CORNER

GONE IS THE SEA

I can hear it now; the sea, still with its roar.
Oh, to reach that sand, those rocks, just to feel them.
The endless security I had known before.

Each wave crashes again, with it comes a hope once more.
How good to be here where beliefs are born and nurtured.

Just to know the unceasing patterns of the water and the shore.
The endless security I had known before.

But this sea is strange. I know it not, nor
Is my pain eased by its splashing, churning waters.
I can hear it now; the sea, still with its roar.

In all of nature not one way left, not one open door.
My own trust crushed, with the breakers, to mere foam.
The endless security I had known before.

Yes, my security was as unreal as the roaring ocean in a shell.
I had lived a dream; the sea had fooled me by its lightless spell.
I can hear it now; the sea, still with its roar.

SAN RAFAEL — KATHLEEN ALLISON

ONE FLOWER

With a restless feeling of impending grief,
My heart sought a hilltop for relief;
And while wandering alone against the sky,
I sensed her willingness to die.

Where last year's growth hugged tight the earth,
There was crumpled death midst new green birth;
And a weed-flower wild, nodded to me
Her silent pleading for me to see.

The frail blue flower at the tip of a stalk,
Caused me to pause and end my walk;
For all of her own had found their place
On the hilltop's vast and mottled face.

A cool breeze stirred—torn petals fell,
Whirling sadly where my memories dwell;
"It's all right, Mother," cried my heart,
Conceding her given time to part.

The now bare stem swayed bent and worn,
Leaving none of her kind, but me, to mourn;
And I felt no shame embracing the years,
With no one near to see my tears.

Through clouds the sun reached out to me,
Warmly touching my shoulder in sympathy;
And this gesture, I knew, was fully intended
When my tired flower fell as Winter ended!

Harpsichord Greats Play Bach And Other Masters

By JOHN SUNIER
Editor, FM & Cultural Guide

ROSALYN TURECK—Harpsichord Recital — Decca Stereo DL 710066.

Side one of this LP provides the main interest with a superb reading of the virtuistic "Chromatic Fantasia" and "Fugue in d" by Bach. This great composition is heard to so much better advantage on the harpsichord than on the pianoforte.

Side two finds Miss Tureck interpreting works of three French harpsichord masters, Rameau, Daquin and Couperin. The best-known works here are probably Rameau's "Tambourin" and Daquin's "Le Coucou."

WANDA LANDOWSKA plays Bach: Italian Concerto, Chromatic Fantasia and Fugue in d, Partita in B Flat, Toccata in D — Angel Great Recordings of the Century COLH 71.

Her treatments show her romantic approach, one which is quite suitable for such ornate and emotional works as the Chromatic Fantasia. The sound, while naturally not stereo, is rich and clear — even better than most of Miss Landowska's later recordings for RCA Victor.

Marin Couples On Stage Together

The highly successful "This Must Be The Place" musical playing Saturday nights at Sabella's Restaurant off Highway 101 is a boon, not only to entertainment - seekers, but to the baby-sitting business as well.

No less than 10 couples of husbands - and - wives are involved in the production.

And this leaves a number of children for whom sitters must be found each Saturday night while mom and dad sing and dance before the appreciative audiences or toil backstage at the new Mill Valley restaurant-theater.

MORRIE AND Harrie Batz, for instance, are the parents of five children ranging in ages from 15 years to 6 months.

Morrie is the president of Marin Variety Theater, producers of the musical.

A mortgage loan correspondent during the day, he began his little theater activities while in high school. He has been active with Tam Valley Players, in the Rhubard Revues and the Marin Shakespeare Festival.

Mrs. Batz, too, has been a frequent performer with the Tam Valley Players and in Rhubard Revues.

SHE HAS been interested in all phases of the theater and, during World War II, enjoyed the challenges of camp shows. She was active in the Palo Alto Community Theater group prior to her marriage. The Batzses met 16 years ago in San Francisco at radio station KAWL-FM where both were studying production.

THE BATZES are ardent champions of husband - and - wife teams in little theater.

"It helps when you have the ability to help each other objectively and to exchange encouragement and ideas," they explain.

Alan and Miriam Burdick top the Batzes in children with six. A veteran of theater activities of all kinds, he is the arranger of the original music for "This Must Be the Place" and taped all the sound for that production.

HIS WIFE, an interior decorating school graduate, has put her artistic talents to work designing costumes and decorating sets, as well as acting.

Of their theater work, the Burdicks say: "We enjoy working together in a different kind of setting than the home. It affords a change of pace from household duties and from parenthood's responsibilities."

Jane and Bernie Healey are the parents of two children and, like the Batzses, are veterans of Rhubarb Revues and Tam Valley Players productions. Bernie is co-author of "This Must Be the Place" and designer of the nine sets used in the show. He is a commercial designer for Pacific Gas & Electric and enjoys painting. Jane is a dancer and comedienne, also interested in gourmet cooking.

SAY THE Healeys of their current stage work: "After nearly 200 hours before audiences and countless hours of rehearsals, we still have that 'opening night' jitters. But perhaps that helps to provide the feeling of a fresh approach each Saturday night.

"And certainly it helps each of us to know that the other is close on hand, rooting for a successful show."

Little theater is truly a family activity with the Edward Fishers. Not only have Fisher, a loan officer for Bank of America, and wife Jetaun been involved with such groups as the Terra Linda and Sausalito little theaters, but daughter Lynne, a Terra Linda High School student, has also appeared with the latter group.

EDWARD IS the thespian, Jetaun the dancer.

Does jealousy ever creep in when both husband and wife are striving for applause from the same audience?

"Not at all," they answer. Edward admits to a frequent show of pride — "that's my wife" — when Jetaun is on stage. And she feels the same about his performances.

The other co-author of the musical romp is advertising executive Walt Lowden whose wife, Bets, is a veteran of backstage work and who has designed the costumes for the current show.

LOWDEN FIRST began appearing on the stage in high school and college, then "retired" until moving to Mill Valley a few years ago. Since then he has appeared with several Marin troupes.

His wife has had experience in make-up as well as costuming.

"A costume should support the character of the actor and never overpower the overall effect," she says. And adds that she has no desire to perform personally before the lights.

Best known of all of Marin's theater couples, of course, are John and Ann Brebner. He is producing the musical at Sabella's while she is directing. Their professional experience in England and the United States includes study at Old Vic and work with a number of Marin groups. They have been the sparkplugs of the highly successful Marin Shakespeare Festival.

THE OTHER couples now involved in the Saturday night musical show (curtain time, 9 p.m.) at Sabella's include:

Ray Miller, an electronics maintenance officer at the radar station atop Mount Tamalpais, and wife Pat. They worked together previously in little theater and musicals in Arizona, Alabama and Maryland, Pat as an actress, Ray as a backstage worker. Mrs. Miller has performed with Sausalito Little Theater. Their common interest in little theater, they say, continues their mutual preoccupation with such other hobbies as square dancing and sailing.

Conway and Andra Enscoe, who met and fell in love while auditioning for "South Pacific" at Sausalito's Gate Playhouse. Andra, a native of Boston, played leading roles in several musicals in the East before coming West, appearing first in "Whoops!" at the Gate and then as Nellie Fobush in "South Pacific." Conway served in the merchant marine during World War II and, between ships, entertained at service clubs in Southern California with the Jimmy Webster Variety Show.

FREELANCE artist Morrell Johnson and wife Shirley. Morrell was with Special Services during the Korean War and responsible for helping to entertain troops aboard troop ships. He is now carrying that experience into his civilian hobby as a performer in "This Must Be the Place." Wife Shirley, mother of two girls, is working with the props.

San Franciscans Bill and Lynn Luthi, who have been active in the Sausalito Little Theater. He is one of the Bay Area's best known little theater stage managers, she is a talented dancer and singer.

Teen-Ager Is Already A Bonsai Expert

Vance Wood Has Been Creating Dwarf Trees Since He Was 13

Vance Wood was 13 when he first became interested in bonsai.

Now four years later and a 17-year-old junior at Terra Linda High School, Vance remains an enthusiastic hobbyist and something of an authority on bonsai trees.

SO MUCH SO, in fact, that he has been selected to lecture and demonstrate upon the "Art of Bonsai" during the Lucas Valley Sunnyhills Guild's "Homes with Flair" show next Saturday.

And Vance's fellow hobbyists showed their complete confidence in the teen-ager last year by selecting him as chairman of the annual Marin Bonsai Club's Show in San Rafael.

Vance says that his brother, Kent, six years his senior, is largely responsible for causing him to take up bonsai, although it was a delayed reaction.

"I was about 10 when Kent first began working with bonsai trees," Vance recalls, "and I didn't catch the fever at that time.

"BUT KENT went off to college and left behind his books on bonsai. When I was 13 I picked them up and started reading them. And I was interested in what I read. The first thing I knew, I was working with bonsai."

Now, at the Marinwood home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Wood, young Vance has some 80 specimens kept on a backyard shelf—"including about a dozen of which I am really proud."

Perhaps Vance's most prized tree is a Douglas fir from Trinity County "for which I was offered $150." He turned down the offer.

BROTHER KENT, now married and attending the University of California, no longer has time to work with the little trees, but he is still interested in bonsai.

And any time he visits the Wood home, you can bet the two brothers will spend a good part of their time in the backyard among the miniature trees.

What is there about bonsai that appeals to Vance Wood?

"I like working with growing things. Nature has always appealed to me," he answers.

He also likes to hunt, fish, garden and landscape.

"I am planning a career in landscaping," he says.

His lecture on bonsai next Saturday will be, he admits, a new experience for him.

HE PLANS to trace the history of bonsai—"The creation of bonsai and its use in landscaping has been practiced in Japan for centuries"—and to tell something about its growth in popularity in the United States since World War II.

He also expects to demonstrate something of how bonsai trees are "made."

And there will be a "plug" for the Marin Bonsai Club which meets the fourth Tuesday of each month at the American Legion Log Cabin in San Anselmo and carries on an active calendar of projects and programs.

"There are more than 300 species of plants that can be used for dwarf trees," he will tell his audiences, "and the pleasure received from a well-cared-for bonsai in your garden is well worth the time and patience it takes to create it."

VANCE'S lecture will be given in the garden of the Jerome Leitner home—one of three homes included in the 1963 "edition of the Lucas Valley Guild's annual homes event.

Also open from 2 to 4 p.m. next Saturday will be the Harrison Wheeler and Robert C. Densmore homes, with champagne and hors d'oeuvres to be served at the former. Other activities will include a fashion show of both men's and women's clothing, art shows from the Rental Gallery of the Marin Society of Artists, singing by Judy Knotts and Jerry Dixon of Terra Linda, and a chapeau-making demonstration by B. J. Leibovitz of Lucas Valley.

AT 17, VANCE WOOD of Marinwood is one of Marin's most dedicated bonsai hobbyists. He is the owner of more than 80 specimens, some of which are seen here. And next Saturday he will lecture on the "Art of Bonsai" at the Lucas Valley Sunnyhills Guild's "Homes With Flair" show.

"REALTY VIEWS"

"We're probably searching for the impossible," said a young man, Lloyd Stellgar with a mixed tone of weariness and hope. "But we've been living with my wife's folks, and we desperately want a home of our own."

"Yes," said his pretty wife, "but money for a down payment is the big problem. By scraping hard, we might be able to come up with $1500."

"Sit down and we'll talk things over," I replied. Questioning revealed that they both worked, and that Lloyd had a job with good prospects for advancement. He was sure his boss would give him a glowing recommendation.

William A. Lewis

"Fine," I said. "Unless I miss my guess, you are the type of people who should appeal to a lending institution. As long as we keep the payments within the accepted range, and don't use up more than $500 in moving you in, you should qualify."

LEWIS REALTY

AT RIGHT, a pergola adds a lift to this yard. If you are tired of a flat, uninteresting backyard, simply add a saucy pergola such as this and you'll see all the difference in the world. Gently curving pergola separates a patio from lawn area. The structure looks intricate, yet it is easy to build with common grades and sizes of Douglas fir lumber. (Photo by West Coast Lumbermen's Assn.)

HANDYMAN'S PAGE

A Pergola Gives The Yard A Lift

Is your back yard just a flat, uninteresting, wide open ballpark with acres of lawn to mow?

Yes? Well, then, perhaps some remodeling is in order.

No family has to suffer the boredom of a monotonous back yard—not when the cure is so simple and low in cost.

What is needed are vertical lines to contrast with the yard's natural lines. You can achieve these and at the same time give your yard real charm and distinction by building a pergola along the edge of the patio. If you don't already have a patio—create one, shaping its outer edge into a soft, fluid curve for eye appeal.

THE PERGOLA should extend over the patio's edge into the lawn area, following the line of the patio, and this saucy structure will serve a double purpose. It will avoid the harsh juncture between paving or deck and the lawn, as well as provide the verticality to eliminate that flat iot look.

A pergola is essentially just two parallel rows of posts joined lengthwise with beams and topped with a decorative trellis crown spanning the columns. The posts can be spaced as much as 10 feet apart. End posts should be joined with a cross beam and be cross braced for stability.

Beams supporting the trellis crown are run down the two row of posts. Doubled one-by-sixes are flexible enough to use for the curved line, and a pair of one-by-sixes should be bolted on either side of the posts, clasping them. Doubled one-by-sixes means that one one-by-six is applied directly over the other.

THE TRELLIS cross pieces can be two-by-six or two-by-eight inch material. They are mounted on edge and spaced far enough apart to create a skeletal effect. Ends of the cross pieces should be extended three feet beyond the supporting structure and can be cut to a decorative point or prow shape.

Douglas fir is excellent for yard structures such as a pergola. It is a tough, durable wood, but easy to work. For the most pleasing appearance and ease of maintenance, let the fir pergola weather naturally to a soft silver grey. It takes about a year, but the weathering process can be hastened somewhat by spraying the wood occasionally with the garden hose.

PERFORATED hardboard in pre-finished panels, decoratively designed for use as "working walls" within the home, have been utilized in this boys' room. Other patterns include random spacings, tracery designs and even square holes. An added feature: Surfaces wipe clean with just a damp cloth.

You And Your Garden In June

June is a good month to divide crowded clumps of bearded iris and to plant new varieties from nursery stock. Established clumps probably need division if it's been three years since you last did the job. When planting iris in the same plot from which you lifted them, work the soil well and add plenty of steer manure. Nurserymen even suggest removing some of the old soil and adding new. The iris takes its toll of nutrients from the ground and these should be replenished.

There Are Many Kinds Of Daisies

Never ask a seedsman or nurseryman for daisy seed or plants.

The more knowledgeable he is the more confused you are likely to be after he has run through the list of daisies for you.

Just to start with, he'll want to know whether you mean African Daisy, African Lilac Daisy, Barberton, Gloriosa, Livingston, Painted, Shasta, or Transvaal Daisy.

Then he'll go farther, if you let him, and talk about Blue, Carmel, Dahlberg, English, Globe, Michaelmas, Orange, Seaside, Swan River, Tahoka, True (smile when you say True, because that is synonomous with English), Turfing, and White.

But that's not all. If you appear to be suitably impressed you may encourage him to give you the Latin names as well.

The sad part is yet to come. When you finally stop the flow and say, "No, what I'm looking for is that nice yellow daisy I have seen growing along the roads," he'll throw up his hands and reply that it's nothing but a weed—and nobody in his right mind would get it started in his garden!

Bedding plants will give you quick color. Asters, marigolds, petunias, ageratum, zinnias, are among the annuals available in nurseries this month for fast bloom. On especially warm days, the young transplanted seedlings should be shaded from direct sun. Use burlap on stakes, or shade each plant with a shingle stuck in the ground. Wilting won't kill a newly planted annual, but it won't do it any good, either.

If you're looking for an easy-to-care-for plant that gives you color through summer, try the felicia, or blue marguerite. This durable little perennial produces an endless array of blue, daisy-like flowers that go well with yellow marguerites or by themselves. They are nearly everblooming, considering the minimum amount of care they need. Nurserymen are high on felicia.

Spring blooming bulbs — especially daffodils—are not ready for lifting until the tops start to yellow off. This usually takes place in July, so don't rush the process by lifting them too soon. If you are impatient to plant something else in a still-occupied bulb bed, the California Assn. of Nurserymen suggests lifting the bulbs with a good share of soil still at their roots and transplanting them to another part of the garden. Continue watering them in their new location until the tops die back.

Roses are available for planting anytime during the year, and while most of them go in the ground during winter's bare-root season, many gardeners prefer to shop for them in June when they are full of bloom. You can find most of the popular new varieties in local nurseries this month, though the All-Americas — Tropicana and Royal Highness—may be in short supply.

One way to keep roses full of bloom is to keep the fading flowers cut off. All faded blooms should be removed before they start to go to seed. Rose bushes can be kept healthy and full of new wood if you take long stems when you cut flowers for bouquets—or when you remove the old blooms that have faded on the bush. Cut flowering stems back to within two leaf formations of the main stem.

Mulching is a June job in the garden. It protects shrubs against the long summer drought, makes it possible to leave them for longer periods between watering. Use steer manure or peat moss in a good three-inch layer around camellias, fuchsias, rhododendrons, azaleas, hydrangeas, hibiscus and other moisture loving shrubs. According to the California Assn. of Nurserymen many gardeners fail to mulch deep enough. Remember, the deeper the mulch layer, the less watering you'll have to do this summer.

GARDENERS CHECKLIST

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- Areate compacted lawn areas with the tines of a spading fork, or preferably with a coring tool which you can find in any nursery.
- Plant dwarf cushion chrysanthemums for summer-long color displays.
- Set dahlia tubers out for late summer color. Drive stakes in beside each bulb to support top growth when it comes.
- Spray, feed and water roses regularly. A manure, peat moss or bark mulch around each bush will help conserve moisture and keep the weeds down.
- Many culinary herbs are available in pots for setting out in the garden. Several potsful of herbs near the barbecue area can be useful and aromatic companions.

MARIN'S RAINY SPRING has resulted in a greater than usual number of "giant" plants in a number of species this year. Here Nancy Pizzaro, 5, shows you the delphinium which towers six and a half feet high in the yard of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Pizzaro, at 15 Billou Street, San Rafael. While such a height is not a great rarity for the delphinium, it is unusual for Marin. (Independent-Journal photo)

JUNE BRIDES

This special section of the Independent-Journal's Marin Magazine salutes Marin County's charming young women who will become brides this month, June, the traditional month of romance, weddings and honeymoons.

Steps To Take If Nuptial Vows Are Planned For June

By CORENA GREEN

"Come live with me and be my love," sang the 16th century poet Christopher Marlowe.

A romantic invitation, no matter what the century, but in California there are a few legal requirements that must come first.

Getting married is not really very difficult, provided the bride and bridegroom are old enough, can pass a physical examination and have $2 for the license. This is obtained in Marin County at the office of the county clerk in the courthouse in San Rafael.

BUT PRIOR to obtaining the license, both parties are required to have a Wasserman test by a duly licensed physician who must sign a statement that the applicants do not have venereal disease in a communicable form. This can be determined by a blood test.

This statement is presented within 30 days with the fee to the clerk—and if an applicant is not "an imbecile, insane, intoxicated, under the influence of narcotics or under the age of consent," the license is issued.

Personal data such as identity, residence, age, marital status, birthplace, residence, occupation, names and birthplaces of mother and father are required. The license expires in 90 days.

If the groom is 21 or over and the bride 18 or over, the license is issued without parental consent. If he is between 18 and 21 and she between 16 and 18, the consent of one parent is required. If the boy is under 18 and the girl under 16, the consent of both parents and the signature of a judge is necessary.

IN ADDITION to the license, the couple receives a certificate of registry. This is presented to the person who will perform the ceremony. When the ceremony is over, the certificate is completed, signed by a witness and filed within four days with the county recorder by the person performing the marriage ceremony.

In California marriages may be performed by clergymen over 21 years of age, justices of the state supreme court or district courts of appeal and judges of the superior courts, municipal courts and justice courts. Judges or justices are prohibited from accepting compensation for performing a marriage except on Saturday, Sunday or legal holidays.

No particular form of ceremony is required, but the man and woman must declare they take each other as husband and wife in the presence of the person solemnizing the marriage. The marriage may take place anywhere in California—not necessarily in the county issuing the license.

MARRIAGES contracted outside the state are valid in California if they are valid in the place where the couple married.

Proxy marriages are possible in California, but difficulty to establish as to validity.

The California Civil Code states that husbands and wives contract obligations of mutual respect, fidelity and support to one another. A husband must support his wife and the wife must support her husband if he is unable to support them. The husband is legally the head of the household and may choose the place and mode of living for the couple provided it is a reasonable place.

IT'S A BIG DAY and an exciting moment as the bride, with plenty of assistance from loving hands, dons her wedding attire as the time for the ceremony approaches. It is an occasion which the young woman will never forget—but will treasure forever.

In The Sight Of God...

By JAMES M. AULT
Dean of Students and Associate Professor of Practical Theology
Union Theological Seminary

Marriage is a continuation of God's creation.

According to the Biblical record, it was not good for man to be alone. By his nature he was made for fellowship. Without a companion he was both lonely and incomplete. So God created woman that together they might become one flesh.

But marriage is more than a physical union, though that to be sure is an important part of the relationship. It goes far beyond the body, embracing mind and spirit. The response of wife to husband and husband to wife is spiritual, mental and physical at one and the same time. Fulfillment was intended to come through this most intimate of all human relationships ordained by God. Man finds his completion in woman and woman finds her completion in man.

THIS INTERDEPENDENCE BETWEEN husband and wife, so necessary if marriage is to be more than a biological and economic arrangement, secures its noblest expression when it is dependent upon God. Now it is possible to be married without even so much as acknowledging God as creator. Many in our society do.

A church wedding is no guarantee that a young couple interprets what they are doing in the service as related to God's creative plan for man.

Some do, and for them the wedding is an action that takes place in the sight of God and in the presence of witnesses who share this religious conviction. For them, commitment to one another in marriage is based on a higher and prior commitment to God.

This kind of faith does not just happen. Fortunate are those anticipating marriage whose parents have led them by precept and example to a faith in God as the greatest reality in life. They have cause to be grateful.

A YOUNG COUPLE WHO has not been blessed in this way need not give way to despair. They are called upon to begin with what they are and have, religiously speaking, and to build upon it. If they take seriously the notion of creation and that no home can be as significant without God as with Him a sure foundation is laid.

Preparation for marriage begins when a child is born into a family. All that happens in that close circle will determine in a large measure what value he places on marriage and family life.

There is a more immediate preparation, however, that can be very meaningful.

Each young couple should seek the counsel of the minister, priest or rabbi who will be responsible for the sacred service. Several meetings should be scheduled and each one unhurried. Certain mechanical details have to be cared for, and other matters for such an important event have to be arranged. But primarily these discussions should be religiously oriented, considering the meaning of marriage and family life within the larger family of God.

THIS KIND OF BEGINNING places the marriage on a spiritual footing. More than that, it prepares the way for growth in love nourished by the worship of God in home and church.

Tempering Of Rules Need Not Alter Ceremony's Charm

In less hectic times, the bride began to make her plans at least three months before her wedding day. She was able to move serenely from ordering invitations to finding a place for the reception to trying on wedding gowns without any last-minute flurry. She had time to be entertained at showers, and time to fete her bridal party.

NOT SO today.

"Sandra told me this morning she wants to marry Bob two weeks from Saturday," says one mother, "because his company is sending him to North Carolina for sales orientation, and she wants to be with him."

"Dick wires he has three weeks' leave before his regiment goes overseas, so we're planning an informal wedding for Janie on the ninth," says another.

Without time for formal, third-person invitations, the bride's mother settles for informal notes or even phone calls.

THE CEREMONY is at 11 a.m. or 3 p.m. simply because the church and the minister are available.

The bridal party's size is determined by the availability of friends who can participate on short notice.

Guests may not have time to shop for that perfect piece of silver, and may find themselves sending the present later to the couple at their new address.

SO PLANS FOR semi-formal or formal weddings, complete with ushers in cutaways or full dress, are scrapped. The bride usually wants to wear a long, white gown, even though etiquette formerly frowned on it for weddings prior to 4 p.m.

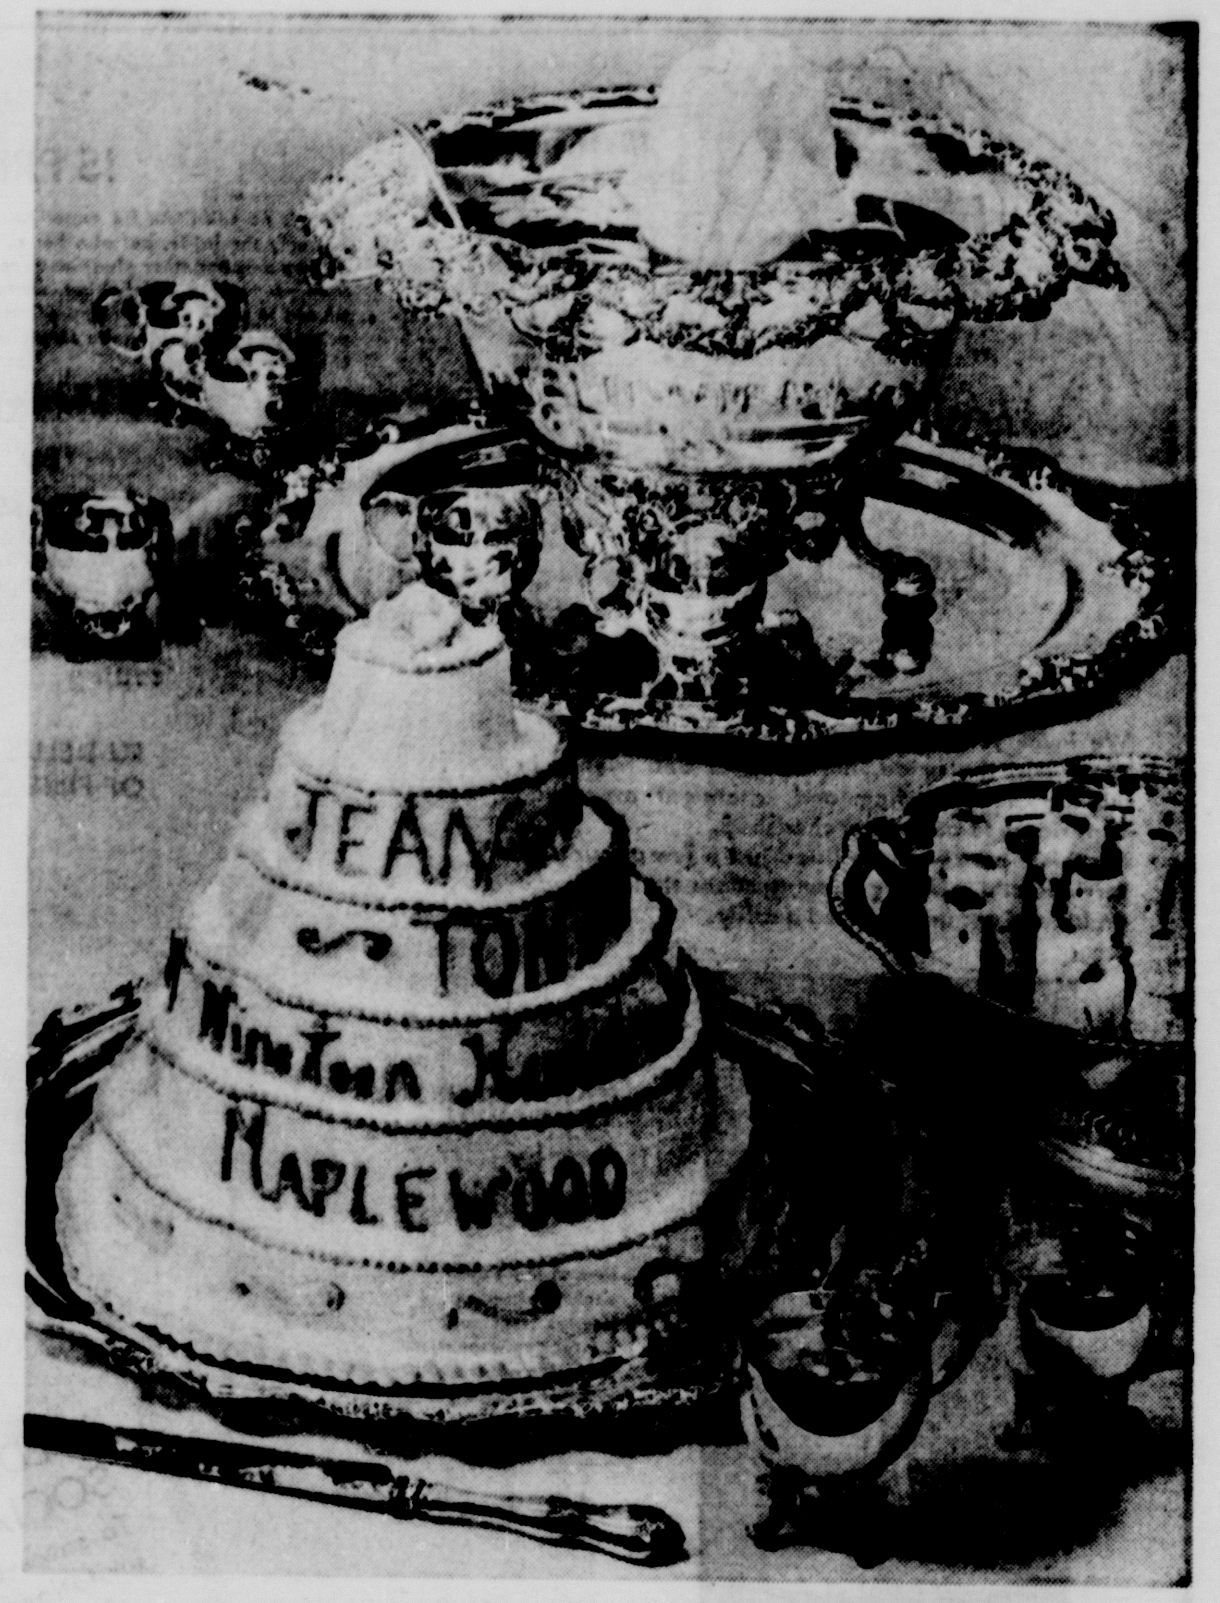
But eliminating time-honored traditions and ignoring elaborate etiquette rules do not alter the beauty of the marriage ceremony. The vows exchanged are timeless, there is joy in the faces of the bride and groom, and warmth and love in the sanctuary.



THE DREAM TABLE

A Decorated Cake And Punch For Toasting The Bride

The home baked wedding cake is hand-decorated with the name, date and place. For a gala reception, toast the bride with a rum and champagne punch, chilled by a peach-filled ice wedding bell. Tangy rolled sandwiches, filled with minced ham, curried chicken, caviar an cream, cress and cheese, prepared and frozen in advance, then defrosted will add zest.

Champagne Punch

- 1 bottle (4/5 quart) white rum
- ½ cup fine sugar
- 1 pound ripe peaches
- ½ cup Curacao
- 6 bottle Champagne

Ice Wedding Bell

- 1¾ pounds peaches
- 1 teaspoon lemon juice
- 1 quart water

Champagne Punch: Pour rum into large punchbowl, stir in sugar. Add thinly sliced peeled peaches. Shortly before service, stir in Curacao, fix ice bell in bowl and add chilled Champagne. For smaller punchbowls, use one-half Rum base, add one-half Curacao and Champagne and repeat when needed.

Ice Wedding Bell: Slice peaches, drain on paper towel. Arrange slices around curve at top of bell-shaped mold. Place cherry in center. Pour in one-inch water and freeze until solid. Soak remaining peaches in lemon juice to prevent discoloration. Place another row of slices facing sideways around mold. Add enough water to nearly cover slices. Freeze again. Then fill any remaining space with water and freeze. Also freeze tall can of water on which to stand bell in punchbowl so it won't sink to bottom.

Wedding Cake: Bake your favorite cake recipe in 3-inch, 6-inch, 7½-inch, 10½-inch and 12-inch pans. Make 4 cups creamy white frosting or use prepared mix. Assemble cake, sandwiching each layer with a little frosting. Warm one-half cup corn syrup. Brush off all loose crumbs, then brush cake with syrup. Spread frosting on cake using spatula, and table knife to smooth ridges. Frost without stopping, as icing forms crisp crust quickly. Keep bowl of icing covered with damp cloth. Color remaining icing and use to pipe decorations and inscriptions on cake. Approximately 75 to 100 servings.

Teen-Agers: Too Young To Marry?

Will the majority of them run into later difficulty, or can there be successful young marriages?

Are there any yardsticks that can be used to feasure future happiness—or future frustration?

A Marin Family Service Agency executive who has counseled many young couples has some ideas as to what it takes to have a teen-age marriage survive.

SAYS NICHOLAS Suntzeff, "Youthful marriages have a good chance of success if:

"Both sets of parents are genuinely interested in their children, but have not pushed them. They have allowed them to go at their own pace.

"Both sets are fully able to accept the marriage.

"Both sets realize the young couple is not ready for all the responsibilities of marriage, and will be available for help if it is sought."

PARADOXICALLY, many teen-age marriages take place, says Suntzeff, just because such parental understanding and wisdom are not present.

"A youngster will jump into marriage to get away from his family. He's seeking love. But it may be a frying pan into the fire jump. The girl he marries may not be the right person to give that love.

"Others marry for security. They've gone steady since the eighth grade. In many teen-age marriages, the girl has known no other boy. She's had no experiences which she would have had if she had dated a number of boys. She's never learned how to draw out a shy boy, how to handle a pass. All that is part of maturity.

TOO YOUNG to marry? That's a question which many teen-agers, and their parents, are confronted with these days. Nicholas Suntzell of the Family Service Agency says teen-age marriages can succeed—providing the conditions are right.

"NOR DOES she know what kind of personality is best atuned to hers. She just sticks to her steady, and after marriage, finds the two personalities are out of tune."

"Parents, preoccupied with modern competition, do not have enough time to give of themselves. The family—and the community—instead push these kids into all kinds of organized activities in which they have no chance to grow up and learn life. Busy with all their extra-curriculars, they are bypassing important experiences."

NO WONDER then, that after five or so years of marriage, experts like Suntzeff hear comments like these from the married-too-young teen-ager:

"Marriage isn't what I expected."

"I thought he was my Prince Charming, but I'm still looking for him."

A Whirl Of Fetes For Bride

And as the wedding date approaches, the bride must decide how to entertain her bridesmaids and what to do for the out-of-town relatives who arrive early for the ceremony.

A WORD OF warning to those whose datebooks are getting crowded: In spite of your friends' sincerity and desire to entertain you, you don't have to accept all invitations. The immediate problems of trousseau buying, finding and furnishing an apartment, writing invitations and closing the details of the reception menu will be enough to keep you in a whirl before the wedding.

If you feel there's just too much going on, suggest to your friends that they entertain you after the wedding. A gift-giving luncheon given for you after you are married is perfectly acceptable.

That way, you can concentrate on your own party for your bridesmaids, which may be a luncheon or even a tea a week or more prior to the ceremony.

IF YOUR wedding is sufficiently formal to require a rehearsal the evening before, it is customary for the bride to entertain the wedding party at dinner. It may simplify matters to have this meal planned at an inn or club, because of the hectic atmosphere prevailing at home. Or a friend of your parents may offer to entertain.

AN UNDERSTANDING shop owner or clerk can be a big help to the bride-to-be faced with the big job of selecting the right wedding gown. Their attention and courtesy can reduce the strain for the girl at a time when she should be enjoying herself—not worrying and hurrying.

These Laundry Shortcuts Will Help The New Bride

Dunking your drip-drys and keeping your white gloves in top condition is probably the extent of your laundry efforts when you're single.

But the sudden switch to laundering for three — you, your husband and your new home—can all but overwhelm a young bride.

There are, however, methods and shortcuts that simplify laundering and at the same time keep a peak of cleanliness.

LETTING CLOTHING or household care slide is not only inconvenient but can actually be harmful, because dirt allowed to remain indefinitely can damage or weaken fabric. Unless spots and stains are treated as soon as possible, they may become "set" and impossible to remove at all.

Make sure that you have ample laundry hampers or bags for storing soiled items until you can launder them. For convenience sake, keep machine washables separate from hand washables.

To safeguard delicate lingerie and sheer hose, use a plastic-lined bag so they won't get lost or tangled at the bottom of an all-purpose hamper.

SAVE THE descriptive labels which come with washables so that you can follow manufacturers' instructions as to water temperatures, washing methods and ironing procedures required. A small metal card file, similar to a recipe box, makes a handy container for such material.

Maintain a regular washing schedule. Many women find it helpful to do a little hand laundry in the bathroom basin every evening. But actually, there are very few things which can't be machine washed safely. Even lace-trimmed lingerie and other sheer items can be sudsed in a washer, if done properly. Encase delicate items in nylon mesh bags to protect them during machine washing from roping, twisting or catching. Use only a short (three to five-minute) cycle in warm soap or detergent suds. Synthetic fabrics do not absorb dirt but become merely surface soiled, and thus wash quickly.

DRIP-DRYING clothing successfully requires some "hand pressing." After arranging a freshly laundered garment on a hanger or other drying aid, stretch and smooth seams, pleats, collars, lapels and trimmings. If "where to drip" is a problem, there are many tricks to stretch space: for example, use one or two large cookie sheets to catch water and keep it off the floor of your "drip-drying room."

An assortment of clip-type hangers, inflatable plastic hangers and a drying rack or extension pole to set in or over the bathtub or shower stall help to make the most of available space. Shaped hangers are ideal for blouses and dresses, while clip-type hangers or clamp skirt hangers are best for skirts, shorts and slacks.

ONE IMPORTANT step in successful laundering is often overlooked: pre-treating. This is particularly necessary for synthetic fabrics and for cottons which have been treated with special finishes.

Once soil lines build up at such susceptible areas as collars, neckbands, cuffs and hemlines, they are virtually impossible to remove, even by drastic washing methods. Scrub such soil "lines" gently with a soft brush dipped into thick soap or detergent suds. Allow the suds to remain for five to 10 minutes to "dig in" and loosen the dirt before laundering as usual.

EVEN IN HER SMALL apartment, this bride manages to dry laundry skillfully — with the aid of a folding rack which fits over the rim of the bathtub to provide yards of dripping space. After drying, she saves steps by carrying both rack and laundry "as is" into the bedroom, for convenient folding and storage. Dark items, such as her husband's socks, are laundered and dried in a separate "load."

Italian Tradition Is Sweet One

An Italian tradition is for the bride and bridegroom to distribute a confection—confetti per nozzi — to their wedding guests.

Then when the newlyweds return from their honeymoon, the candy is wrapped in tulle and personally delivered to the homes of relatives and close friends.

Windows Are Where Originality Shows

Some Tricks In Treatment Can Add Imagination And Verve To Decor

Tricks in window treatments require a dash of imagination and a sprinkling of verve, rather than a sizeable bank account.

In this area of room decorating, the courageous bride has a better-than-even chance of success, if she's alert to the use of fabrics not usually considered drapery or curtain material.

DECORATOR Ellen McCluskey, who is particularly interested in window treatments, has a horde of helpful suggestions.

Another combination is brown burlap and sewing on stripes of black velvet, horizontally if the windows are narrow, or vertically if they are wide.

The same imagination can be displayed in designing valances, to which Miss McCluskey is particularly partial. The valance can be painted, covered with wallpaper to match the walls, covered with fabric or upholstered. To make a window particularly outstanding, Miss McCluskey designs a frame around three sides of the window.

IF A WINDOW is badly placed, she suggests putting draperies across it and extending across the wall, but warns that to be successful, these should have 250 per cent fullness.

Draperies of the same fabric as the wallpaper are especially good if the window is off-beat, she says. With matching draperies, it will be less conspicuous.

New trend in windows is to use decorated shades and eliminate more expensive draperies. The shades, of the simple roller variety, can be edged with braid or ball fringe, can have stripes painted on them, or be covered with wallpaper.

SHOPPING FOR FABRIC for draperies, this couple look for a durable, wash-and-use material as well as a texture and color that they like.

Some Important Things To Know In Buying Diamond

COLOR IN a diamond is a delicate thing. A faint shade or tone can make a world of difference. The finest commercial diamonds resemble a crystal clear drip of water with a faint bluish tinge. The bluer the tint the more valuable the diamond.

Nothing in nature is perfect and a diamond is a product of nature. However, the smaller the flaws in a diamond and the fewer there are, the greater the value.

Cut refers to the shape of the diamond and the process by which it is changed from the rough to the faceted stone. Until the stone is cut its value is but a potential. The full measure of beauty is attained only by the proper cutting upon which hinges the diamond's fire and brilliance.

Carat is the acceptable standard of weight for diamonds. The carat is divided into 100 points. Thus, when a girl says her diamond is one-quarter carat she means 25 points.

Wedding Expenses Can Be Tailored To Fit The Budget

It All Depends Upon The Degree Of Formality The Bride Desires

Before you contract for a sit-down wedding receptiton for 200, you'd do well to take an over-all look at the total sum available for wedding expenses . . . and plan accordingly.

Experts who have given some thought to this matter say that brides don't realize that "hidden costs" involved in a wedding add up to approximately 50 per cent of the total sum, nor that the wedding gown doesn't take as big a chunk out of the budget as does the reception.

They may fail to realize too, that the size of the budget relates directly to the formality—or informality — of the function. It is economically impossible for a bride-to-be to plan a formal wedding and country club reception on a $500 total budget.

SINCE THE degree of formality is also the ultimate criterion as to the hour of the wedding, all plans hinge on the size of the wedding budget.

Experts are quick to state that it isn't the amount of money that makes a wedding truly beautiful, but the way the money is spent, with good taste and with dignity.

A wedding costing $500 might be informal or semiformal with one or two attendants. The reception could be planned for 50, and held at home or in church facilities.

With $1,000 to spend, the list of guests can double to 100, and the attendants increased to four, though the wedding itself would remain semiformal.

A BUFFET reception for 150 at a club or hotel is possible with a $1,500 budget at hand, with the function again semiformal.

Six to eight attendants are possible at a wedding costing $4,000, and from 100 to 300 guests can be entertained at a club or hotel. The wedding meal would be either buffet or a sit-down dinner, depending on the number of guests.

HER DREAM DRESS

Most Brides Want Their Gowns Long

"No wedding is informal enough to warrant wearing a short dress, if the bride in her heart really wants a long gown," says bridal shop owner Heather Stanley.

"If she says she wants a short gown, I ask her why. Most girls really want a long gown. If she does want a long gown and someone has tried to talk her into wearing a short one, I try to talk her into it again.

Mrs. Stanley, whose gowns range from $50 to $350, says most of her customers spend around $125. And, she adds, for those trying to save money, long gowns as well as short can be found under $100.

What To Do On The Receiving Line

Though the term "receiving line" may sound both formal and formidable at a wedding reception, it actually means little more than a grouping of participants in a wedding to receive greetings from the guests.

Quite naturally, as hostess, the bride's mother is the first person the guests will meet, with her husband beside her and then the groom's parents. The bride stands on the groom's right, and next to her, her maid of honor, and then the bridesmaids.

IF THERE ARE many—say six—bridal attendants, they may stand three at either side of the bridal pair.

Such a receiving line will look less stiff if there is space between the various groupings. With the current easing in formality, the fathers need not maintain their place in line, but can move about greeting guests.

Introductions do not need to present a problem, since thoughtful guests who know few in the receiving line are very likely to identify themselves without embarrassment. Those the bride's mother knows, she can introduce in friendly fashion to the groom's parents by saying, "I want you to meet Jeanie's godparents, Mr. and Mrs. White."

AT INFORMAL weddings, or at church weddings where some of the guests will not be going on to the reception, it is thoughtful to form a receiving line at the back of the church, in the same order. In this case, the ushers will probably stand in a group next to the bridesmaids, whereas at a reception, they are freed from such official duties.

At a home reception, the bride and groom may elect to omit a receiving line, and stand by the fireplace or in front of a bay window.

Because there are fewer guests, there is ample time later on for all participants to talk with those at the reception.

Nail Polish? It's Up To Bride

It's up to her.

Clear is always in good taste. Pink and rosy tones are flattering to hands and the brilliant sparkle of diamonds.

A FORMAL DINNER TABLE in white and silver answers the beginning hostess' table-setting questions with Reed & Barton's sterling flatware Savannah laid at each plate in proper arrangement for four courses. Dessert fork and spoon will come in later on dessert plates. Silver place plates gleam under white appliqued organdy napkins. A silver goblet, a glass one rimmed in silver and a Tara ashtray complete the place setting. A silver epergne in rich flowing design complements the flatware pattern and holds white spider 'mums and white candles. Cigarette urn has a renaissance design.

THE SEMI-FORMAL DINNER in five courses calls for this table setting with the sterling flat silver laid in correct order at each place. A pink linen cloth serves as background for white service plates with soft-etched border of black and gold, topped by smaller black plates each holding a white shell filled with crab meat cocktail—the first course already on the table when the guests sit down. Low modern silver candlesticks hold tall black candles about a silver bowl with black grainware lining filled with fruit of many colors. Dessert fork and spoon will be placed on dessert plates.

THE SUNDAY NIGHT SUPPER or informal dinner setting sees the rule for bringing dessert silver in on dessert plates discarded in favor of placing it above the plate after the English custom. The Reed & Barton sterling Savannah flatware glitters against a green linen cloth. Green leaf soup bowls are set on white plates. Candles are white. Fruits and a dash of green flowering foliage fill a free-form silver bowl which—along with the plain silver sculptured ashtrays, contrast very nicely with the delicate decoration of the flatware to provide an altogether charming setting.

There Are Rules Governing Your Table Setting

Some Dinner Party Guides To Help The Young Bride

Who? . . . The bride.

Where? . . . In her new home.

Why? . . . Because a party is fun and she is eager to do a bit of creative work with her glamorous new table appointments.

How? . . . She is probably aware of how her silver should be arranged on the table—and yet, in times of fuss and flurry, things we are most familiar with are the ones we forget.

RECENTLY A new bride—with ample background experience—reported, "Do you know when Bruce brought those three extra guests in to dinner the other night, I suddenly had a sort of mental blackout, I couldn't remember whether the knife blade should be turned away from the plate or toward it."

The direction of a knife blade might seem to be a trifling matter but—even in this last half of the 20th century when our tables are edited for simplicity—the placing of the silver flatware is still governed by a set of rules as definite as army regulations.

ALL OF THIS is covered in a series of table settings by Reed & Barton, America's oldest major silversmiths, which show their sterling "Savannah" pattern in correct position and also—interestingly—in its decorative relationship to other silver pieces on the table.

Both formal and informal dinner settings illustrate the established edict that flatware shall be placed in the order of use from the outside and spoons to the right; forks to the left (with the exception of the fish or cocktail fork which goes on the far right).

On the formal table, the soup spoon is placed on the far right for the first course, then the knife for the main course to be used with the fork (far left). The salad fork next to the plate (left) will be the last piece used before the table is cleared and the dessert brought in with the silver on the dessert plate—fork to the left—spoon to the right.

Teaspoons or demi-tasse spoons are placed on the saucers of tea or demi-tasse cups whether coffee is served in the living room or at the table.

FOR THIS formal setting the flatware can sparkle against an appliqued white organdy cloth. And appliqued white organdy napkins may lie on silver service plates.

There's a silver goblet and a glass one banded in silver at each place. The centerpiece is silver richly carved and curved into an epergne that holds aloft four white candles around a glass holder filled with white spider "mums."

Silver cigarette urn and ash trays complete the picture.

There are no bread and butter plates since this is a formal dinner. They appear in the semi-formal setting with the butter spreader laid across the top of each one.

THE COCKTAIL fork too puts in an appearance (at the far right) to accommodate the first course, a crab meat cocktail, which is already on the table when the guests sit down. It is placed on a white China shell set on a small size black service plate which in turn is set on a white china service plate bordered in black and gold—all this against a pink linen cloth.

EVEN THE OUTDOOR buffet table can have real eye-appeal. Here Fonda's Firmware with its barbecue design contrasts prettily with turquoise tablecloth, orange napkins and matching cups. Centerpiece has been made by cutting cardboard into a two-by-one-foot rectangle and covering it with green crepe paper. Larger paper-made fruits are then pasted to the cardboard, supplemented by plastic grapes, leaves and yellow-colored wheat. The completed arrangement is then placed on a long, narrow tray.

The black note is repeated in the centerpiece, a silver bowl with a black grainware lining—filled with colorful fruits and in black candles in low modern silver candlesticks.

Setting for a luncheon is like that for the semi-formal dinner with the first course, a soup or even salad, on the service plates when the guests sit down; dessert silver coming in the dessert plates and coffee served by the hostess at the table or in the living room.

A POPULAR variation for an informal luncheon or dinner or Sunday night supper is the placing of the dessert silver above the plate — a thought and time-saving device too for the maidless hostess.

A Sunday night supper setting shows the sterling flatware in an elegant frame arrangement with the fork handle above the plate turned to the left, the spoon handle pointing right.

Plates are white, soup bowls leaf green and leaf shaped, linen cloth leaf green and the centerpiece a free-form silver bowl with fruits stacked in its narrow end, tall sprigs of spring foliage rising from its wider end. At this end, too, stands a silver candle holder filled with five tall white candles.

IN THE REED & Barton setting the sterling flatware is lined up center front, forks on one side of a pile of plates, knives on the other. Plates are turquoise decorated. Linen cloth and napkins are turquoise. A chafing dish of unusually beautiful shape holds hot food, a silver bowl offers salad.

And handsomely presiding over the whole scene—though it stands on the side of the table against the wall—is a big beautifully ornate silver candelabrum backed by a tall arrangement of varicolored spring flowers and pussy willows.

The purpose of the settings is to show not only the correct arrangement of sterling flatware but also its part—along with other pieces—in the composition of the table settings of today when the tendency is to let one's silver play a top role in the table's decoration.

IN A BUFFET SETTING, the silver flatware marches in a straight tailored line across the front of the table—on either side of a pile of plates. The linen cloth is turquoise. Plates are decorated in turquoise with a center of small flowers cued to the carved flower design of the knives and forks. A silver chafing dish contributes warmth and hospitality, salad is in a silver bowl and a dignified and elegant three-branch candelabrum lifts white candles against an arrangement of iris, snapdragons, pussy willows and spring foliage.

Economy Is The Key To Decorating When On-The-Move

Young Couples Frequently Spend First Year In Temporary Homes

Young couples who must spend their first years of marriage moving from one temporary home to another at the command of big business or Uncle Sam face decorating problems their mothers never encountered.

Each of the apartments they live in will be of different dimensions. Some will be long, narrow rectangles. Others will have jogs for a dining alcove. Windows will be of varying heights and widths.

FACED WITH this continuing dilemma, what should the young bride buy in the way of furnishings?

Practical-minded Blair Catterton, who has observed his own four married nieces on the move, recommends only the basics: A good sofa of standard size, a good lounge chair and a 9x12 rug.

"You might as well forget wall-to-wall carpeting," he advises. "Buy a 9x12 of wonderful texture, perhaps in a nothing-beige, and when all this moving is over you'll still have something.

"CHOOSE LAMPS with basic columns and opaque shades. As you move about, you can paint the shades the color you want."

To bring brightness and a personal feeling into impersonal surroundings, Catterton, director of interior design for a New York department store, suggests the use of one print.

"There are lots of bright, young and gay prints of marvelous styles in the $1.75 to $2.50 a yard category. Use them everywhere: as draperies, covers for upholstered pieces, to cover the seats of dining room chairs, over pillows, to cover screens. When it's time to move, untack the prints and reassemble them in new surroundings.

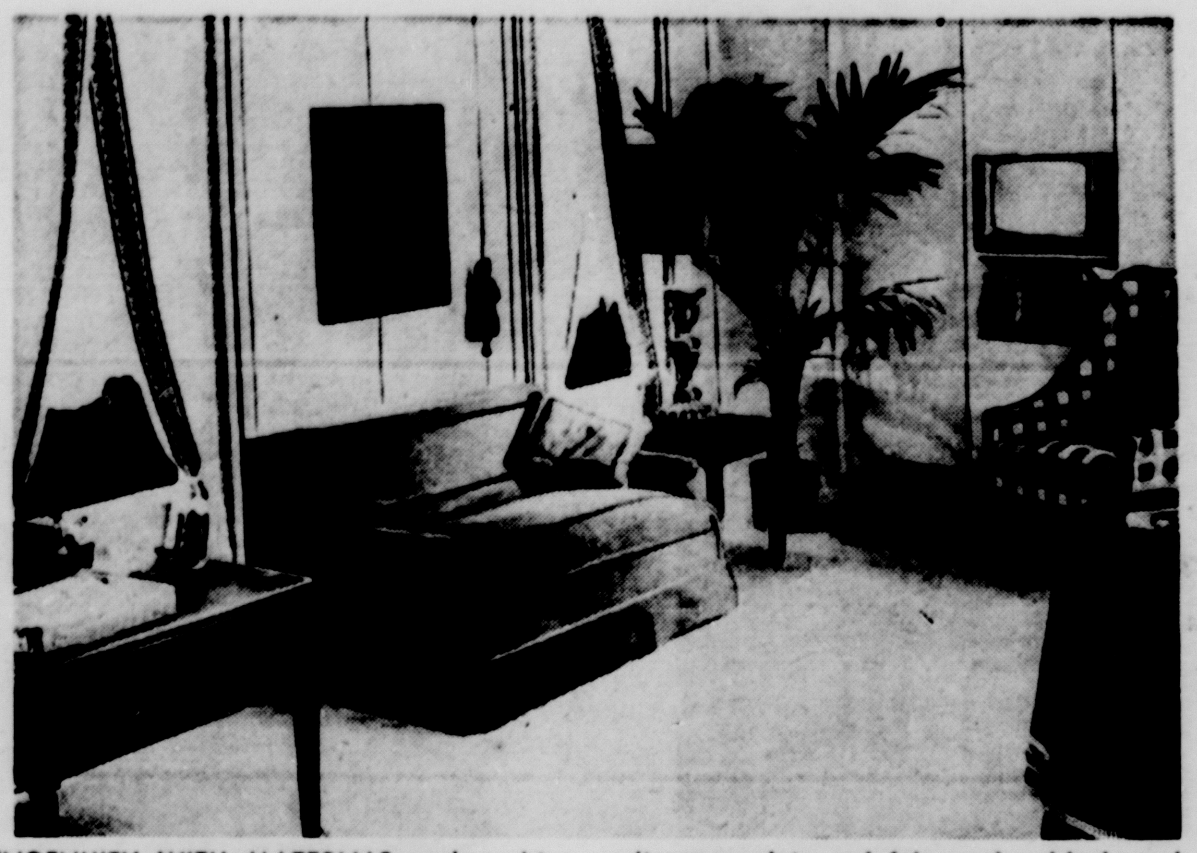
Other easy-to-transfer schemes the ingenious decorator suggests include bamboo shades the couple can enamel themselves, in shiny black, perhaps, or hot pink, depending on the print color scheme; using a length of felt to throw over a bed or as a dining table covering; making draperies of sheets ("There's nothing as successful as sheets, perhaps with ball trim"), and framing one fine picture or gorgeous old map rather than cluttering walls with lots of pictures.



INGENUITY WITH MATERIALS makes this a dramatic room. Paul Krauss was the decorator. Walls are covered with white burlap, and a matching burlap Roman shade pulls down to hide the TV set. The couch is slip-covered in red felt, and a black and white Belgian linen covers the chair. A blue felt cover has been thrown over an up-ended barrel, which offers concealed storage space for books, magazines and newspapers.

Invitations Hold Prime Importance

Whether you're planning a small informal wedding with only two weeks in which to make arrangements, or are having a large ceremony and a country club reception, the delicate matter of deciding on the guest list is of first importance.

Fortunately, the invitation serves dual purposes.

For distant relatives and friends who could not possibly attend, it becomes an announcement of your forthcoming marriage.

IT CAN ALSO be used selectively, for you may have a church full of guests for your wedding, and invite only a fraction of them to the reception.

The larger the wedding, the sooner you must decide on the guest list, for engraved invitations, in the traditional third-person style, are prerequisite. These should be ordered at least one month prior to the ceremony.

Those guests whom you wish to attend the reception should receive an engraved card saying "Reception immediately following the ceremony, Oak Knoll Country Club, Midvale, R.S.V.P."

IF THE WEDDING is to be informal, a note written by the bride or her mother is sufficient. There is no accepted form for such invitations; in fact, the notes should be as personal as the relationship with the guest-to-be.

For the very small wedding with few guests, it is customary to send out no invitations at all, but following the ceremony, to mail an announcement card.

SWEETHEART CHEST

A Logical Starter Piece For Home

The upswing in marriage rates among young people has created a heavy concentration of interest in home-planning among the youthful population.

A RECENT survey shows that 47.5 per cent of all first brides are under 20 years of age, and that more girls marry at 18 years than at any other age.

The girl looking toward a home of her own is a collector of "firsts." The first place settings of silver, china and crystal are usually acquired during the teen-age years.

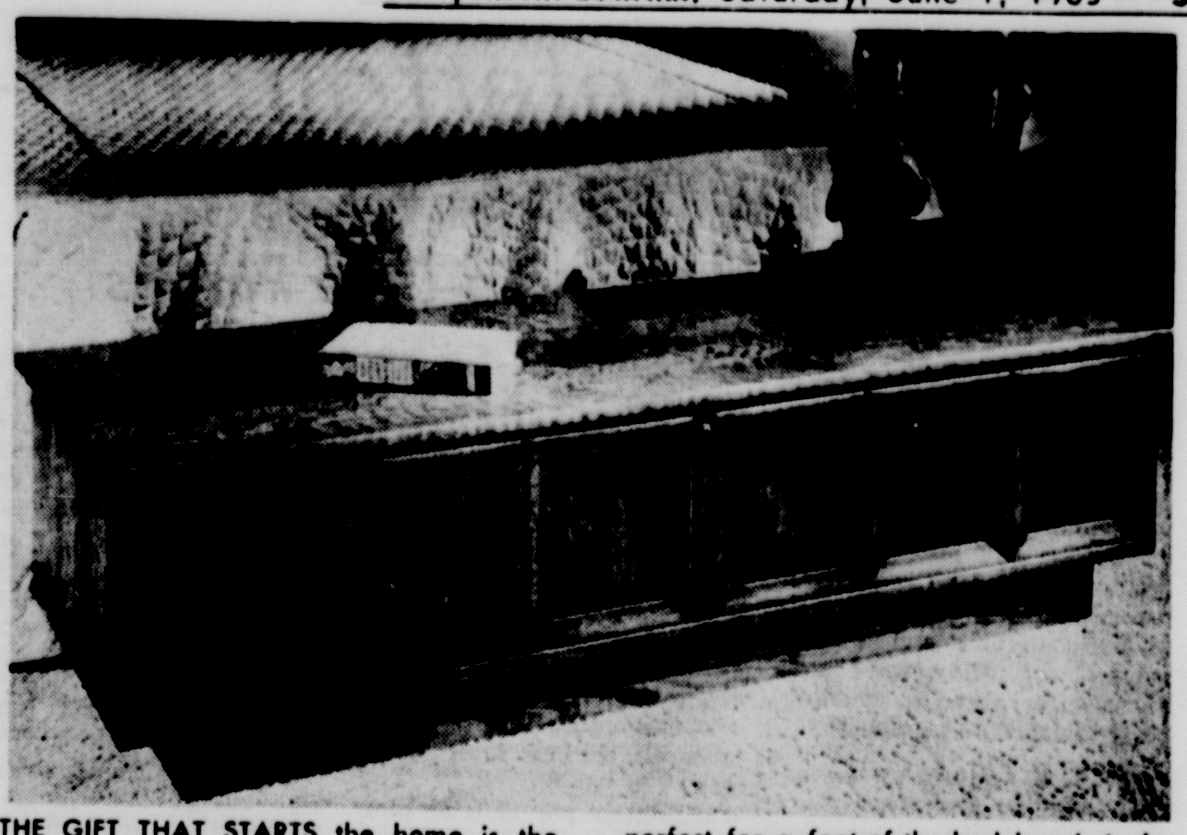
THE IDEAL "first possession" for young couples about to set the date is a handsome "sweetheart" chest — a furnishing especially designed for young moderns planning a future together.

It is the first furniture item a young girl can call her own, and, as a result, sweetheart chests have become tremendously popular pre-engagement gifts from single young men to the girls they hope to marry.

A recent survey reveals that 80 per cent of all sweetheart chests are purchased as gift items—and that most are given by young bachelors to "that special girl!"

THE UNIQUE designs of these cedar-lined chests are scaled to the interests and tastes of romantic young home planners and are styled to add beauty to any room of the house.

No matter what the decorative taste of a young couple, the decor of a room can start with a cedar chest. A number of fine woods and a variety of styles—ranging from traditional and provincial designs to the smartest contemporary — make the new sweetheart chests attractive starter pieces for any home.



THE GIFT THAT STARTS the home is the cedar-lined "sweetheart" chest. The long, low lines of this handsome model make it perfect for a foot-of-the-bed bench in her bedroom today. For her future home, it will double as a window seat in nearly any room in the house.

The Hope Chest

In Victorian times a family provided a daughter with a form of dowry by helping her accumulate silver, linens and other household effects in a hope chest.

Budget Entertaining—

Some Tricks For The Young Wife Who Will Want To Give Parties

Brides who look forward to giving parties need to know a few tricks of the trade. Here are some cues gathered from young couples with entertaining but budget-wise ways.

One of the most popular ways for the bride and groom to have company is to ask two to five couples to supper. The amount of dinnerware and flatware garnered as wedding gifts dictate the number!

GONE IS yesterday's formal little supper, and invitations leave no doubt about the menu. "Come over Saturday night for paprika chicken or Italian spaghetti . . ." is the way a bride is likely to issue a bid.

A casserole is still a favorite main dish for the little supper, but a bride can also pick up interesting alternates from young marrieds in various sections of the country.

From Massachusetts comes a great way to satisfy a Saturday night supper group: Homemade fish chowder, pilot crackers and rolls, old-fashioned cole slaw (to eat along with the chowder) and Washington pie. An inexpensive variety of fish along with potatoes, onions and milk make the well-flavored robust soup. And a salad bowl of everyday lettuce is positively elegant when it gets a topping of crumbled Roquefort cheese (a small wedge) and paper-thin red onion rings. The Washington pie is true blue—sponge-cake layers (from the supermarket) sandwiched with red jelly and topped with confectioners sugar.

FROM NEW YORK comes a Sunday night supper menu. Its mainstay is baked beans mixed wtih ground beef (browned first in a little fat), onion and tomato and seasoned with mustard, curry powder, brown steak sauce and a suspicion of grated Parmesan cheese. A half pound of the beef is all that's needed for two large cans of the beans.

Finger-food salad — carrot, celery and broccoli-stalk sticks. Accompany this with a shaker of seasoning salt for the "dressing!" Red apples, gingersnaps and coffee make an appropriate and flavorful ending.

Surprise! Here in California brides have been known to serve New England boiled dinners to company. Corned beef, cabbage and potatoes are high hat when they're offered with imported mustard. Sliced thin, the beef goes a long way, and cabbage and potatoes are definitely on any bride's budget. Pineapple shells filled with mixed fresh fruit make a glamorous dessert.

IN FLORIDA the outdoor barbecue or indoor fireside supper reigns. An inexpensive cut of beef is given a tenderizing marinade, then skewered alternately with squares of green pepper, wedges of tomato and onion. Partner to the meat is a pilaf made from rice (brown or white) or cracked wheat. Dessert might be a special Ambrosia—orange and grapefruit sections plus strawberries topped with snowy coconut.

Southern brides, like their mothers, enjoy giving "morning coffees" on weekdays and over the weekend, too. Hot strong coffee is the rule here plus sandwiches or coffee cake.

Brides everywhere enjoy entertaining at brunch.

A young friend of mine living in Washington, D.C. asked me to give her a waffle iron for a wedding present. At Sunday brunch it's waffles she serves along with bacon or little brown sausage links and maple syrup. Anything may be added to the waffle batter, she tells me, from canned whole-kernel corn to pecans.

MAXIMUM RESULTS for a small dinner party are achieved by this young couple with minimum effort. Advance planning, husbandly cooperation and a delicate but durable china set make for easy entertaining. The oven-to-table cookware is coordinated in design with the china.

SOME GREGARIOUS young couples go in for weekend potluck lunches and progressive suppers. "Bring what's in the house," is the rule for the potluck lunch and the menu is likely to produce some interesting combinations and lots of fun.

Progressive suppers had their heyday in the 20s and were likely to be on the formal side. Nowadays they are usually limited to three courses — an appetizer for soup, a casserole and perhaps salad, and dessert and coffee. Just right for three couples.

For big parties, punch is always a good bet. It can be non-alcoholic or it can have spirits; it can be economical or luxurious. With a punch a bride might serve an excellent widely available frozen pound cake—if cut in thin strips it goes a long way. Or the pound cake can be made at home from a mix.

CIDER AND doughnuts are always fun for a crowd. In cool weather, the cider may be served spiced and hot in mugs. "Store" doughnuts are greatly improved if they're bought plain and then heated and sprinkled with confections sugar just before serving.

If a bride feels the need of offering something more sophisticated than plain cider, it can be spiked with rum.

So take heart, you brides, where there's a budget there's also an appropriate bill of fare.

Greek Custom

Around 500 B.C., during the golden age of Greece, the convention of the dowry was established. A man was expected to give his daughter at least one-tenth of his property upon her marriage.

Advice For Bride Who Must Run Her Home On Shoestring

Brains rather than brawn are prerequisite for the young wife who must run a home on a shoestring.

And if she, like so many teen-age brides today, has little if any skills in cooking, sewing and improvising, she's in for a real program of self-education.

"PROCESSED foods and drip-dry clothes cut down on the young homemaker's time in the kitchen," agrees Luise Addis, who has guided many inexperienced young brides to better homemaking. "But in return, she sees an average of 6,000 items in the supermarket. How to shop wisely in the face of so many choices is a problem for her. She has to learn all this in a hurry, too."

Mrs. Addis, the director of home economics and nutrition at the Community Service Society in New York, comforts the novice housekeeper by adding that "there is a fantastic amount of good information available if the girls are interested in the challenge. Government pamphlets, meal-planning suggestions put out by utility companies, shopping guides and menu ideas in daily newspapers, and market information distributed by county agricultural offices are extremely helpful."

BEFORE PLUNGING into the intricacies of the nearest supermarket, the young bride can do her homework via the ads on special buys that usually appear in the Wednesday and Thursday editions of daily newspapers, advises Mrs. Addis.

If she has freezer space, and if the weekly budget will take it, she can buy specials in quantity. And though a half-cent saving doesn't seem like much, it pays to invest in the "two for 43 cents" and the "three for 71 cents" items.

Until the new shopper has gained some experience, Mrs. Addis recommends she underbuy, and also that she study the shelves and counters with a discriminating eye before she even begins to fill her shopping cart.

WITH INCREASING experience comes increasing confidence, and the young homemaker will automatically make the choice between fresh, frozen or canned green beans, depending on the season of the year, the availability and therefore the price.

She'll also be aware that a new product that is being introduced is likely to be underpriced, and that a store's own line is likely to be cheaper than others. By then, she's well on her way to getting her degree as a wise shopper.

THE FORMAL pre-bridal portrait is often the one sent to the newspaper before the wedding so that it can appear with the wedding story. So, of course, the bride-to-be will want to be at her best. Some advice: Avoid sunburn, balance your total makeup using a somewhat lighter pancake than usual, and, most important, relax when "posing."

THE PRESENTS FOR BRIDES ADD UP FAST

THIS LITTLE KNIT goes to the office, and comes home by way of the market, looking as fresh as ever. The white, soft-hanging cardigan and the navy sheath can be dunked in the washing machine, since it is orlon. For another look, a rainbow-striped jacket or flowered sweater can make an appearance.

Knit Dresses Belong

A 'Must' For Any Trousseau

There's a whole, wide, rainbow-hued world of knits waiting for you, the bride-to-be.

They're indispensable for your honeymoon car trip. They're mainstays of your life as a working girl. And they're so pretty, and some of the weaves are so sparkling that they're perfect for an evening out.

When they first made their appearance into the fashion world, they cut no swath color-wise. Early knits were available only in beige and gray.

Now look at them! They're splashed with bright flowers. They glitter with gold as metallic threads are woven in with rayon and wool. An addition of the proper amount of mohair to wool makes a fuzzy, country-time knit.

And when synthetic yarn is used, it means that pleats stay in place, and wrinkles refuse to appear even in the worst weather.

LIKEWISE there's no best-favored style among the knits. The three-piecers are strong favorites because they're so trimly tailored, and can be mixed-matched with other separates. But the knit is also a popular A-line shift, a figure-hugging sheath, and is sleeveless for dressy occasions, has a straight, flaring or pleated skirt; in short, can do anything in style.

Best of all, some knits are so light weight that they're wearable in all temperatures except the tropical.

Some Sound Financial Advice For Guidance Of Newlyweds

Rather than listening to the joyful sounds of coins and counting the other cash, the young marrieds are advised by experts to think about financial security — including the money they don't have.

Money, say the economists, does four jobs. First, it must provide funds for meeting day-to-day expenses. Second, it must provide a reserve fund of ready cash for emergency expenses or minor luxuries.

THIRD, IT should cover an adequate insurance program. Fourth, it should include an investment program.

In figuring how much money you have, remember that it's not how much you earn, but how much you bring home after all deductions that counts.

After minimum housekeeping expenses are met, a savings account usually is the first step toward financial peace of mind.

Regular saving is indispensable, for it provides cash that can be reached in a hurry. Three months gross income is the minimum to keep on hand in a savings account; six months income is the maximum for the earnings offered.

IN BUYING life insurance, remember that its function is to provide security if the family's major breadwinner should die or become incapacitated.

Should Parents Lend Helping Hand To Young Couple?

And if so, what should be in that hand: a deed to a house, a blank check, a receipted bill for graduate school?

SAYS HENRY Graham, executive director of the Family Service Assn. of Indianapolis, Ind.: "Parents have, of course, a moral obligation to help the young couple. But before they give any kind of assistance, they should examine their own motives.

"Are they helping in order to control the couple?

"Are they helping to promote their own egos?

"Are they helping to keep the other person dependent?

"Are they helping to get gratitude?"

If such hidden motives are not brought to light by such self-examination, Graham feels help can be given—but only on a temporary basis, as a means to an end.

A certain amount of laissez-faire is essential for all parties concerned, the family counselor says.

"YOUNG PEOPLE should both have an opportunity to let their needs be known, and also to refuse help that is offered," he states. "If the marriage is to survive, the young people must develop emotional maturity, which means independence from their parents."

"I favor helping the young husband complete his education, rather than handing out money for specifics like food and furniture.

"In case of illness, parental help may be needed, and this of course has a purpose and an end to the helping.

"TEEN-AGE couples in particular need some companionship with their parents. These youngsters can be dreadfully lonely. They are isolated in a real sense; they don't go around any more with unmarried individuals, and they are not likely to make contact with teen-age couples. They need to visit with their parents."

Other kinds of help will be acceptable, says Graham, if the assistance does not impose the standards of the older generation on the younger.

TROUSSEAU SELECTION is no problem with the veritable flood of matching five-piece sets on the fashion market. They go off on a honeymoon auto trip, and find infinite uses at home. This set in black and white includes short skirt, blouse, shirt and fitted short jacket.

DRAMATIC white sleeveless tunic slips over a simple worsted wool sheath for a special night out. The tunic is of nylon, mohair and wool. Any number of versatile changes can be wrung on the sheath, via stoles, cardigans or distinctive costume jewelry.

The New Trends In Gowns

Time was, when a girl's wedding dress was nostalgically retired to a box in the attic, and never again worn.

Today's bride, however, envisions herself not only radiant at the altar in wedding white, but going on through the year to dances and parties in the very same gown—with a few subtractions.

The slightly flaring sheath is a very popular choice, since it has a detachable train. Other long gowns have low, square-cut necklines, covered up for the wedding with bolero lace jackets, and ending in three-quarter sleeves.

The jackets are reversible, and can be worn buttoned down the back for the ceremony, and turned frontwards for other occasions.

THE SHIMMER of yards of gleaming white fabric is effective enough for many young brides. If there is adornment, it is subtle. Quiet insets of lace and tiny pearls may be scattered down the skirt, and the jacket may pick up the design. One very young-looking gown has tiny bows of the same fabric sewed on one seam from waist to hem.

If the gown has no train of its own, it is likely to dip and flare in the back, but with less fullness of fabric than in the past.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The views of Eleanor Roosevelt on the real meaning of the marriage ceremony are expressed here. Few women ever participated in as wide a variety of complex and highly formal social occasions as she, both in this country and around the world. Her ideas on the true meaning of etiquette were stated in her book, "Book of Common Sense Etiquette," of which this is a portion.)

By ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

During a long and eventful life I have attended many weddings, and have helped to arrange several.

They have ranged in size and atmosphere from the smallest and most informal, to the largest and most rigidly formal and expensive. Among those which I remember with the keenest pleasure and that seemed to me to have the greatest dignity and the most beauty have been small informal affairs at which the light in the bride's eyes seemed to illuminate the proceedings, and the groom's quiet dignity strengthened my faith in the future of mankind.

IT HAS BEEN at these that I have felt most strongly that I was witnessing not only a wedding, but a marriage in the deepest and truest sense.

Two small informal weddings which I have had a hand in arranging, I remember with particular pleasure.

In one, my daughter-in-law Mrs. James Roosevelt arranged to have the young couple stand in front of some climbing roses on the lawn near her gray stone cottage in Hyde Park. The couple came out from the cottage accompanied only by two little flower girls. My two teen-age grandchildren were the witnesses. The ceremony was of the simplest, and afterwards the couple merely turned around and were greeted by their relatives and friends. A friend of thiers played the piano by an open window; and this was the one contribution which I made, as my piano had to be brought over from my nearby cottage.

AFTER THE ceremony an unpretentious lunch was arranged on tables on the lawn.

In this case the bride had made her own dress, and the young couple's chief concern was putting what money they had into doing over an old village house nearby that had great charm, but needed badly certain modern improvements.

The other wedding, which I arranged, was also very simple. It was held in my New York apartment. There were some flowers in front of my fireplace where the rabbi stood, but the ceremony was a quiet one and only the close family and friends were present. Afterwards some light refreshments were served. Then the couple left for their own home.

ELEANOR ROOSEVELT
A Plea for simplicity

In both cases, though the ceremonies were simple, there was no question but that the couples involved were solemnly and happily entering into the responsibilities of a real marriage.

JUST RECENTLY a young man, marrying a lovely girl from a family of moderate income, said to me, "That wedding is going to cost Helen's parents over $6,000, and that would make a very nice down payment on a home."

Six thousand dollars was a very great deal of money to him. Actually a wedding sometimes costs several times that amount, and I often think of how much human suffering might be alleviated by the money so spent.

BEAUTIFULLY INFORMAL is this bouffant taffeta ballerina wedding gown with detachable Chantilly lace jacket. The bridesmaid wears a two-tone silk organza in blue over fern. The bride's headpiece is a pill-box of intricately wired pearls in aurora borealis stones, and the bridesmaid has a tailored pill-box to match her dress fabric.

QUIETLY ELEGANT is this silk-faced peau de soie gown ornamented by embroidered Alencon lace beading. The bell skirt has a very full and bouffant back. The bridesmaid's gown is of silk organza, its darted bell skirt adorned by tiny bows of the same fabric. The bride's pearl crown is attached to a three-tier, elbow-length veil while the bridesmaid has a double lily headpiece with buds and pearls.

THIS GOWN is a white full-length sheath of embroidered lace. The only fullness is added by the veil which also extends full length.

There's A Time For Beauty Care To Go Sub Rosa

You may look absolutely irresistible when dining by candlelight—but how romantic can a girl be when her face is gooped with cream, and her head is bulging with rollers or embalmed in yards of paper to protect a chic coiffure?

Your long-suffering family or college roommate may have become resigned to this Halloween look, but a bridegroom isn't always so indulgent. Even if "he" has already seen you curling and creaming, this is hardly a look on which to build a dream.

NATURALLY, beauty care should not cease the minute the wedding march is ended—but a few strategic techniques can make it less obvious.

First, remember how lucky you are to be young—and take advantage of this blessing. At your age, skin is so soft and beautiful that you do not need the deep-penetrating creams and special treatments required by older women. Your pretty, natural-looking self is your most important beauty asset, and this can best be preserved and enhanced with plenty of soapsuds. Besides thoroughly cleansing, softening and refining skin, soap-and-water cleanliness fosters that enviable translucent glow.

SO GIVE yourself a daily "soapsuds facial," which is as simple as it is effective. Just wash and rinse once at the basin to remove surface grime and stale cosmetics. Then massage on a second thick lather from your throat clear up to the hairline—using all upward motions.

Rinse well and pat dry.

If you still feel the need for cream, apply it before bathing or showering. The warmth and moisture in the bathroom will help it penetrate more rapidly. After bathing, simply wipe off any remaining residue.

One remedy is to shampoo at least once and preferably twice a week. By removing the grime and oil which mat and dull hair, shampooing adds body to your locks and makes them more manageable.

Even those between-shampoo pick-up sets can also be managed unobstrusively. A half-hour or hour should be enough time to put new life into a drooping wave, so set your hair in the evening — being sure to cover the "evidence" with a dainty, feminine curler cap—and remove the rollers before retiring. This pin-up time will be even more effective if you roll up your hair before bathing, because normal bathroom steam serves to firm the set more rapidly.

Or if you prefer, follow this same procedure in the morning instead of at night. Set your hair the minute you arise, put on a pretty cap, and by the time you have showered, dressed and breakfasted, your coif should be revived.

Neighbors Gather Flowers For Wedding

In some southern communities, friends and neighbors gather all the blossoms for a week from their gardens and give them to the bride who is planning a home wedding.

She takes them to the florist who uses them to trim the house and in the bouquets.

Kentucky Custom

A charming custom in Kentucky concerns home weddings and "serving" maids. The bride's best friends wait on the guests and each one wears a corsage made to go with her dress.

THE FIVE-EYELET shoe worn by the prospective bridegroom is correct for the before 7 p.m. formal wedding where the groom wears cutaway jacket and gray stripe trousers. The formal country wedding in church or garden calls for white flannels, navy coat and pure white shoes. For the informal summer wedding where a gray or blue suit is worn, a black slip-on is correct.

THE MAIDEN accustomed to high heels may select a shoe (foreground) of white peau de soie with dipped sideline and high straight heel for wedding wear. Lower heel is found on the foot resting on the carpet—in an ivory satin slipper with scalloped throatline and delicate Louis heel. The shelled-out pump with glittery pom-pon has the popular "little" heel. Other good choices include a ribbed silk with square throat and medium heel, a low-heeled silk pump with square toe and throat punctuated with a bow, and a white silk flat slipper.

Flowers For The Big Day

Choosing a floral theme for the wedding which is repeated in the flower arrangements at the home reception can be done with artistry, even if the bride-to-be is managing her wedding on a budget.

By selecting flowers that are plentiful and in season, or blooms that are available year-round, costs can be held down.

While home weddings are not as common in Washington D. C., since the city is filled with career girls who go home to be married, those who are married in the capital prefer all-white floral decorations.

In the summer in the South, the daisy is favored, and gardenias combined with ivy are popular. In the fall, feathered chrysanthemums make up the bridal bouquet, as well as the house decorations.

Here Are Some Helpful Tips On Selecting Wedding Shoes

Today's gay tying of old shoes to the bridal couple's car finds its origin in the ritual of casting a shoe after the bride to signify her father's transfer of authority to her new husband.

Traditionally, her shoes are white or ivory to match her gown. If she wears a delicately tinted blue or pink dress, the shoes are dyed to match.

Practically in material of the shoes need not be a consideration, this one time, but the bride's shoes must be comfortable if she is to feel, and look, her best.

The National Shoe Institute says that since the lowered heel has become high fashion, no bride has to teeter down the aisle on spike heels. However, she can wear the very high heels if she want to, and is accustomed to them. By the same token, she can wear entirely flat heels.

Whether the gown be street length, ballerina length or sweeping the floor is not the criterion of proper heel height, the institute says. Choose heel height instead by the height of the bride, your height in comparison with the groom and the shoes which feel most comfortable on your feet.

The Wedding Cake And How It Started

Each of the wedding guests brought a sweet bun. These were piled as high as possible and if the bride and bridegroom could kiss over the top, they were assured of prosperity.

Find Time And Money For Fun

Young couples who have to pinch pennies on a schedule that includes job, college and housework may very likely feel a bit of resentment at the realities of married life.

One or the other, sometime during the first year of marriage, is likely to have secret thoughts that run like this: "I do feel cheated . . . I never knew I'd be so tied down . . . I got trapped."

BEFORE THE thoughts come out in the open, Mrs. W. Ralph Bender, executive director of Family Service Association of Northern Delaware, recommends that couples allow time to have a little fun, even, she says, "if something slips."

"If there is no break in the hard routine of practical existence, a burden is put on the couple's relationship," she comments. "They need to go to a movie now and then, or to go bowling, or to go out to dinner, even if it's only a hamburger plate.

"THERE MUST be some leisure time allowed for in the week, even if it means beans for dinner twice running. This is particularly true for teen-age couples who move from the relative ease of their parents' homes to tight quarters. One couple I know has no sink in their apartment.

"They wash dishes in the bathroom basin. In another case, if the oven door was down, it blocked access to the closet. Getting away from cramped quarters is essential, and then you come back to them with a happier point of view."

A Tradition Holds True In Marin

The tradition of June brides has been holding true quite consistently in Marin County, according to records of the Marin county recorder.

With a few exceptions, the month of June has been the most popular month for marriages by far.

Going back to 1959, we find 70 marriages recorded in June, whereas the average per month was only 48. In 1960, June brides totalled 101, almost double the year's monthly average of 55. In 1961, 72 couples filed marriage licenses in June. This was exceeded only in September, when 81 were filed.

Last year, 80 marriages were recorded in June. But the marriage boom did not subside with that month. In July and August, the figure rose to 83 for each of the months, then gradually began dropping in September.

Why there was such a big boom (101) in June of 1960 is not known, unless leap year has something to do with it. Next leap year is 1964, and so June next year should be something to watch.

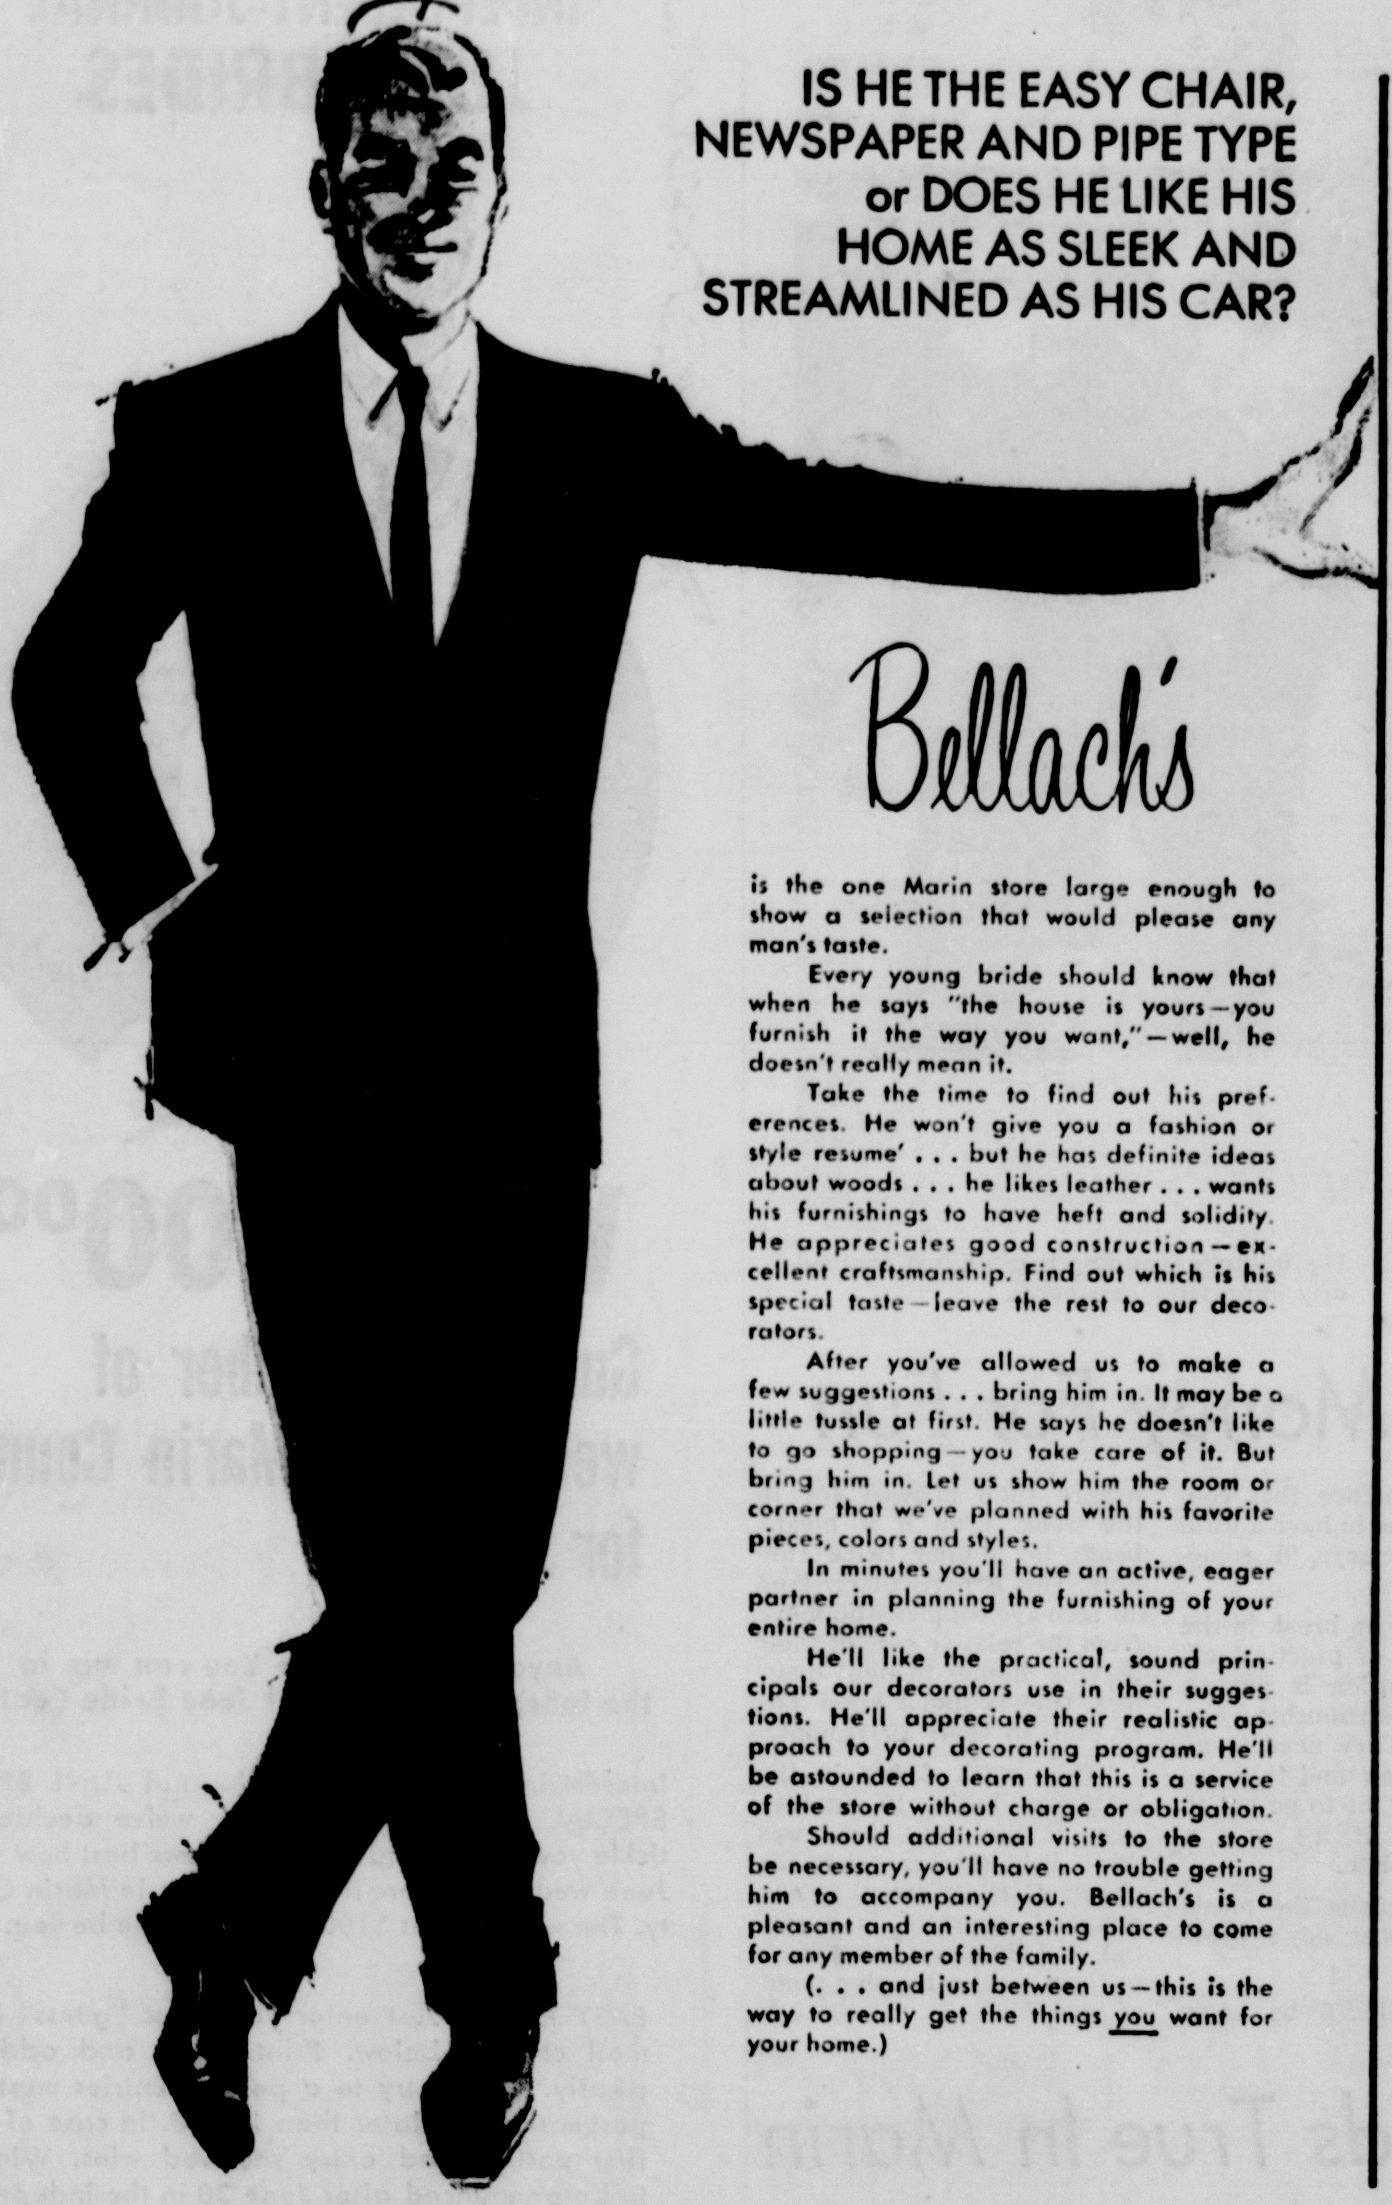
What's your husband like?



IS HE THE EASY CHAIR, NEWSPAPER AND PIPE TYPE or DOES HE LIKE HIS HOME AS SLEEK AND STREAMLINED AS HIS CAR?

Bellach's

Every young bride should know that when he says "the house is yours—you furnish it the way you want,"—well, he doesn't really mean it.

Take the time to find out his preferences. He won't give you a fashion or style resume' . . . but he has definite ideas about woods . . . he likes leather . . . wants his furnishings to have heft and solidity. He appreciates good construction—excellent craftsmanship. Find out which is his special taste—leave the rest to our decorators.

After you've allowed us to make a few suggestions . . . bring him in. It may be a little tussle at first. He says he doesn't like to go shopping—you take care of it. But bring him in. Let us show him the room or corner that we've planned with his favorite pieces, colors and styles.

In minutes you'll have an active, eager partner in planning the furnishing of your entire home.

He'll like the practical, sound principals our decorators use in their suggestions. He'll appreciate their realistic approach to your decorating program. He'll be astounded to learn that this is a service of the store without charge or obligation.

Should additional visits to the store be necessary, you'll have no trouble getting him to accompany you. Bellach's is a pleasant and an interesting place to come for any member of the family.
